

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at http://books.google.com/

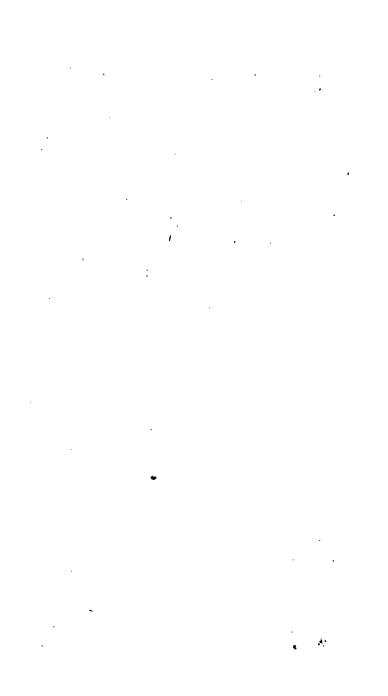

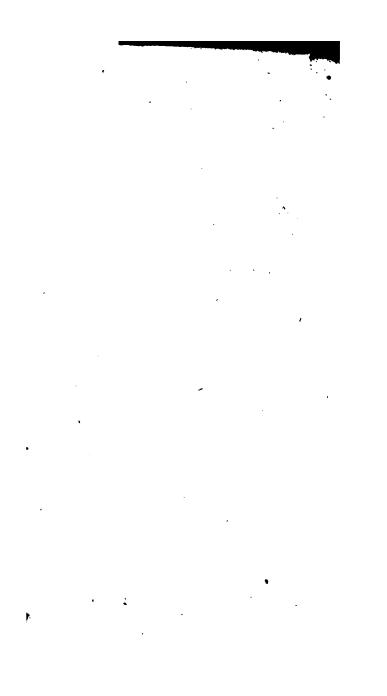

NEW FOUNDLING HOSPITAL

FOR

 \mathbf{W} I \mathbf{T}

BEING A COLLECTION OF

FUGITIVE PIECES, IN PROSE AND VERSE,

NOT IN ANY OTHER COLLECTION.

WITH

SEVERAL PIECES NEVER BEFORE PUBLISHED.

A NEW EDITION, CORRECTED, AND CONSIDERABLY ENLARGED.

IN SIX VOLUMES.

VOL. IV.

L O N D O N:
Printed for J. DEBRETT, opposite BurlingtonHouse, in Piccadilly, 1784.

offine Honor

Contents of the Fourth Volume.

The Pieces marked thus " were not in the former Edition. Page. RITISH Ambaffadrefs's speech to the French King Review in 1719 On the E. of M's carrying the Sword of State 9 * Highlanders Fight 10 * Surprizing History of a late long Administration 13 * Cardinal Richlieu's double-faced letter 17 * Litchfield Defeat 18 Tarpaulin opinion on promotions 21 * Epigram : Says Watkin to Cotton, &c. ibid Written under the Picture of Dr. Hayter 22 * Ode to an unpopular Man in 1753 A Simile. Corinna. 26 Doll Common 29 Corinna vindicated 32 Stanzas, addressed to no Minister nor Great Man Stanzas, addressed to a Great Minister and Great Man 38 Epigram on the Battle of Minden On Mr. Pitt's Refignation in 1761 39 ibid On the Dismission of Earl Temple On the 30th of November ibid Stanzas by Lord Capel 40 Verses by Sir Walter Raleigh 44 Parody on the foregoing 47 Epigram 49 Lord Bottetourt's Advertisement versified ibid On Lord Bottetourt being appointed Governor of Virginia 50 On Mr. Yorke's taking a Patent of Precedence 51 Epigram on a Barrifter lofing his Hat 52 ibid Ode in 1764 Parody on Chevy Chace 56 Political Creed for 1766 67 The Earl: an Ode 69 Coronet 71 Epiffle to a Friend in the Country 74 Proposals for a Print of a great Commoner 79 Rats and Cheefe 81 83 Epigram Dialogue between Ralph and Hodge ibid ical Death of a late Commoner 84 ent at Marlborough 85 Death ibid to W 86 87

ilid

•	-
	•
CONTENTS.
	<* * a
Analogy between Legislation and Horse-racing	92
Lord Northington's toast -	94
Offer of a Young Minister — —	95
Epigram on the retirement of Lord Bute -	97
On the King declaring no money should be spent in Election	s ibid
Epigram on Fox	98
Epigram, by an Eton Boy	ibid
Lines posted up at the Sun Fire Office in 1768	99
Ballad on the General Election in 1768	100
Political genealogy —	101
Directions for new-painting the City Arms	ibid
Campaign of 1768	102
Inscription for Marshal Thomas	103
Inscription for a Column in the Isle of Thanet	ibid
To Mr. Harley, on the dedication of a Tower	104
Infcription for the Villa of a decayed Statesman; by Mr. Gray
* Jemmy Twitcher, or the Cambridge Courtship	106
Imitation of Anacreon, to J. W. Esq. Epistle to John Wilkes, Esq. in Confinement	107
The whole dispute between Law and Politics	109
The Lion in the Toils; by Mr. Kenrick	ibid
Harry and Nan	111
On the Duke of Bedford's arrival in Ireland	115
Middlesex Election, a Ballad —	118
On the Investiture of Cardinal Bernis with a blue ribbon	121
Epigram on Lord Bute -	123
Ode to Coionel L	ibid
On Mr. Secretary Bradshaw -	123
State Ceach —	130
Epigram. Outs and Inns	135
A Character —	136
The Answer	137
Conversation between the heads on Temple-bar	138
Dialogue at St. James's-gate	140
Mr. Gray's Ode on the Installation of the Duke of Grafton	144
Gray Travestic -	145
To any Minister or Great Man -	158
On the University Church, Oxford, being converted into	a ``
Law-school	160
Elegy on the late King	ibid
The first wish of my Heart -	163
Extempore, on the Ottoman Porte	164
To the Conqueror of Louisbourg, &c.	ibid
The Answer -	167
Ode to Lord North on commanding the House of Common	s 170
Pindaretra	1-4

CONTENTS.

The Lye —	17
Petticoat Administration	17
To the Author of the preceding	18
On Encroachments on the River	18
Liberty Hall	19
Ode to St. Stephen	19
Fragment, by the Author of a Monody on a Lady	19
Thomson's Preface to Milton's Arcopagitica	19
On Races for Runny Mead	20
On the Death of the Duke of Newcastle	20
Letter from Aberdeen	ibi
The Church's Lamentation	21
Ode for 1776	21
Another -	21
Impromptu on the Land Tax	21
A Panegyric -	21
The Lunatic -	21
Alexander's Feast parodied, on the Naval Review	220
Ode to the —	22
* Ode to Sir James Lowther	23
Hen and golden eggs	238
American Epigram -	239
Sailor's Address -	240
Epigrammatic Question -	24
On Sir Peter Parker's wound off Sullivan's Isle	ibio
Elegy on General Mercer	244
Rifing Glory of America -	24
* Prospect of Arts and Sciences in America; by Doctor	• • •
Berkeley, Rishop of Cloyne	257
* Logic and Morals, to Lord Shelburne -	259
* On feeing General Arnold at Court	ibio
* Ode to General Arnold -	ibio
* America: an Ode	26
Proposals for a new Dictionary	270
Persian Song, translated by Sir W. Jones -	27
* Tour to Celbridge	278

The Pieces marked thus * were not in the former Edition.

	Page
RITISH Ambassadres's speech to the French King	5
B Review in 1719 — —	8
* On the E. of M's carrying the Sword of State	9
Highlanders Flght	10
* Surprizing History of a late long Administration	13
* Cardinal Richlieu's double-faced letter -	17
* Litchfield Defeat	18
* Tarpaulin opinion on promotions	21
Epigram: Says Watkin to Cotton, &c.	ibid
Written under the Picture of Dr. Hayter -	22
* Ode to an unpopular Man in 1753 —	ibid
A Simile. Corinna. — —	26
Doll Common	29
Corinna vindicated —	32
Stanzas, addressed to no Minister nor Great Man	34
Stanzas, addressed to a Great Minister and Great Man	36
Epigram on the Battle of Minden	38
On Mr. Pitt's Refignation in 1761	. 39
On the Dismission of Earl Temple	ibid
On the 30th of November —	ibid
Stanzas by Lord Capel	40
Verses by Sir Walter Raleigh	44
Parody on the foregoing	47
Epigram Lord Bottetourt's Advertisement versified —	49 ibid
On Lord Bottetourt being appointed Governor of Virginia
On Mr. Yorke's taking a Patent of Precedence	50
Epigram on a Barrister losing his Hat	51
Ode in 1764	5 2 ibid
Parody on Chevy Chace — —	56
Political Creed for 1766	67
The Earl: an Ode	69
Coronet	71
Epistle to a Friend in the Country	74
Proposals for a Print of a great Commoner	79
Rats and Cheefe	8 t
Epigram —	83
Dialogue between Ralph and Hodge -	ibid
On the Political Death of a late Commoner	84
Whimfical event at Marlborough	85
On Churchill's Death	ibid
King Bladyde to William Pitt -	86
Jesuits double-faced Creed	87
Hints for a political Print, in 1767	ilid

Her gen'rous temper can't forget so ioon The royal favours you have always done, Both to her father and his injur'd fon; And, therefore, is contriving every day / This mighty debt of gratitude to pay: For you she ceas'd the thunder of the war, Laid up her sleet, and left the Channel bare: For you, the fighting Marlborough's difgrac'd, And in his room a peaceful general plac'd: For you she broke her word, her friends betray'd, With joy look'd on, and faw them victims made. She knows the has no right the crown to wear, And fain would leave it to the lawful heir. In order to effect this grand design, And baffle all the Hanoverian line, A fet of ministers she lately chose, To honour, and their country, equal foes: Wretches! whose indigence has made them bold, Who would betray their native land for gold. Oxford's the chief of this abandon'd clan; Him you must court, for he's your only man. Dartmouth and Bolingbroke are friends to you; But 'tis not in their power much hurt to do. But Oxford reigns prime minister of state, Ruling the nation at a mighty rate: He. like a conjurer with his magic wand, Doth both the queen and parliament command.

Kcep

Keep but that wily trickster still your friend,
He'll bring your wishes to a prosp'rous end;
Give him but gold enough, your work is done;
He'll bribe the senate, and then all's your own.
Now is your time to push for Britain's crown,
And six king James the third upon the throne.
A pow'rful sleet prepare; you need no more
But land the exile on his native shore:
They'll soon depose the present reigning thing,
And in her room proclaim your fav'rite king.

Thus spake the gay ambassadress, when straight Up rose the tyrant from his chair of state; With love transported, and a joyous air, Within his trembling arms embrac'd the fair. That night, as same reports, and some have heard, A pompous bed was instantly prepar'd, Wherein the monarch and the heroine lay, And spent their time in politicks—and play. The duke, o'erjoy'd that his Italian dame Could in so old an hero raise a stame, With an ambitious pleasure, as 'tis said, Led her himself unto the royal bed.

THE REVIEW. WRITTEN IN THE YEAR 1719

I.

SERENE the morn, the leason fine,
Great George advancing on the plain,
To view his hoft, and concubine,
The goodly bleffings of his reign;

CHORUS.

The trumpets found,
The courfers bound,
The field all blaz'd with arms;
His Trojans true
Their tacticks shew,
And Helen shews her charms.

II.

The gods of war, and love, by turns, Prefide upon his phiz; One while you think for war he burns, Another while for Miss.

III.

You think, when he furveys his men, He'd waste the world for same; And that he'd people it again, When he surveys the dame.

IV. But

Contents of the Fourth Volume. The Pieces marked thus * were not in the former Edition.

	Page
RITISH Ambassadres's speech to the French King Review in 1719
Review in 1719 -	. 5
* On the E. of M's carrying the Sword of State	9
* Highlanders Flght — —	10
* Surprizing History of a late long Administration	13
* Cardinal Richlieu's double-faced letter -	17
* Litchfield Defeat -	18
* Tarpaulin opinion on promotions	21
Epigram : Says Watkin to Cotton, &c.	ibid
Written under the Picture of Dr. Hayter -	22
* Ode to an unpopular Man in 1753	ibid
A Simile. Corinna.	26
Doll Common	29
Corinna vindicated	32
Stanzas, addressed to no Minister nor Great Man	34
Stanzas, addressed to a Great Minister and Great Man	36
Epigram on the Battle of Minden	38
On Mr. Pitt's Refignation in 1761	39
On the Dismission of Earl Temple	ibid
On the 30th of November —	ibid
Stanzas by Lord Capel -	40
Verses by Sir Walter Raleigh	44
Parody on the foregoing	47
Epigram —	49
Lord Bottetourt's Advertisement versified -	ibidi
On Lord Bottetourt being appointed Governor of Virginia	50
On Mr. Yorke's taking a Patent of Precedence	51
Epigram on a Barrister losing his Hat	52
Ode in 1764 — —	ibid
Parody on Chevy Chace —	56
Political Creed for 1766	67
The Earl; an Ode —	69
Coronet	71
Epiffle to a Friend in the Country	74
Proposals for a Print of a great Commoner	79
Rats and Cheese —	81
Epigram —	83
Dialogue between Ralph and Hodge -	ibid
On the Political Death of a late Commoner —	84
Whimfical event at Marlborough	85
On Churchill's Death —	ibid
King Bladyde to William Pitt	86
Jesuits double-faced Creed —	87
Hints for a political Print, in 1767	ii id
same sor a position s since in sioi

THE HIGHLANDERS' FLIGHT, A NEW GRUE-STREET BALLAD.

Vicit amor patrize.

WHEN an ample relief

For Austria's fair chief.

At length was decreed by these islands;

We summon'd our force,

Dragoons, foot, and horse,

And a regiment setch'd from the Highlands.

In their own country plad
They were cleverly clad,
And feem'd as well furnish'd for war;
That one would have thought,
They'd as fiercely have fought
As a Croat, Pandour, or Hussar.

This regiment was reviewed upon Finchley common in 1743, preparatory to their march for Harwich in order to embark for Germany, but as foon as the review was over, the men mutinied and deferted. Their plea was, that they had inlifted under a promise not to go abroad. They immediately began their march for Scotland, but were taken by a party of Wade's horse near Oundle in Northamptonshire. They were brought to the Tower, where three were shot, and the rest were sent to Gibraltar and the West Indies.

Our troops crost the water,
The King follow'd after,
But the Highlanders would not go over;
For though they all swear,
Yet none of them care
To fight for the House of Hanover.

They would not agree
To croffing the fea,
And a doubtful campaign to go thro';
For receiving their pay,
Their fixpence a day,
Was all they thought they must do.!

They remember'd Argyll,
What he did ere while,
And they follow'd that step of his Grace's;
Who seeing from far
That there must be a war,
Resign'd his command and his places.

So when danger was nigh
They determin'd to fly,
And on England each man turn'd his breech;
And with joy they run home
To the place whence they come,
To beggary, oatmeal, and itch.

Do our regents act right,
Who hinder their flight,
And to Scotland won't let them repair?
They are furely too first,
For can they inflict
A worse punishment than to go there?

O yes there is one,
And I wish it was done,
In spite of all Semple + may say;
Since they won't march or sight,
Disband them outright,
And strip them of cloaths and of pay.

We have fometimes been told,
That the English of old
Have fled from their enemies blows;
But the Scotch, for their glory,
Are the first in all story,
That run without seeing their soes.

+ Lord Semple, their colonel.

George,

George, stand thy own friend,
And never depend
On such Jacobite rebels as these are;
They're for another king all,
And would sly to his call,
As Lepidus' troops did to Cæsar.

THE SURPRISING HISTORY OF A LATE LONG ADMINISTRATION,

SHEWING THE WONDERFUL TRANSACTIONS, THE WISE
MEGOTIATIONS, THE PRUDENT MEASURES, AND THE GREAT EVENTS OF THAT MOST ASTONISHING PR-

BY TITUS LIVIUS, JUN.

PRINTED ORIGINALLY IN THE SIZE OF TOMMY THUME'S song Rooks.

" WHEREAS our trusty and well beloved Truste

14 Mushroom has at great labour and expence com-

of piled the history of our administration: We have " thought proper, at his humble request, to permit

B 5 " him

- " him to print it; and we order that no other perfon do prefume to print the fame at their peril.
 - "Done as one of our greatest acts, this last moment of our administration.

G—— г. В—— н."

INTRODUCTION.

THERE is not any thing so eagerly read by the publick, as those shining periods of history which are filled up with the important negotiations and fagacious conduct of some great politician. But the qualities which must conspire to form an author capable of doing justice to so grand a period, are so rarely to be met with, that it will perhaps be efteemed an unpardonable presumption in a common writer, to attempt so arduous a task. Yet invited by the grandeur of the subject, and spurred on by the love of glory, who can forbear to enter on fo great a defign? The work will immortalize the workman. In hopes therefore of a glorious immortality, and inspired with the dignity of the subject, I fit down to write the ensuing history with all the candour, truth, and impartiality that becomes an historian, entering on the performance of fo elaborate and magnificent a work.

PART THE FIRST.

ON the tenth day of February one thousand seven hundred and forty-five, his grace the duke of Newcastle, and the right honourable the earl of Harrington refigned the seals into his M-y's hands. And

The King was pleased to appoint the right hon. John earl Granville to be principal secretary of state.

And now was to commence such a revolution in our political conduct as was to aftonish all Europe. The king of France, the queen of Spain, the pope, the devil, and the pretender, were all to be demolished in the twinkling of an eye. It was prophesied by the London Evening Post, that several dark passages in our modern annals were to be cleared up; that certain trials, which had been for some time sufpended, were to go on without a screen; and manyother great things were to be accomplished. In order thereto several changes were to be brought about; one in particular is told by a tart historian of the present times in the following manner.

A certain wag, well known by the name of Will Waddel, played a comical unlucky trick the other day, with a companion of his who is lately come from Carlisle. Will told this youth, that he could procure him an admirable place in the family of a certain great man of his acquaintance; and accordingly took the youth, who had powdered and bedressed dreffed himself in a very smart manner, to the gentleman's house. Will went in to the gentleman, and left his friend without to cool his heels, as the phrase is, in the antechamber, having acquainted him, that he should soon be called in and hired. The Carlisse lad waited a long time expecting the return of Will, who had slipt down a pair of back stairs and departed; at last the house-maid coming to sweep the rooms, found this young man walking backward and forward, and, instead of getting his place, he narrowly escaped being carried before justice De Veil, on suspicion of having a felonious design on the house.

B 6

Many other changes and experiments were to have been attempted; but Heaven always tries the virtues of a hero by fome disappointments, which balk his hopes and baffle all his great defigns; as you will see in the second part of our important history.

PART THE SECOND.

ON the fourteenth day of the same month of February, in the very same year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and forty-sive, the right hon. earl Granville resigned the seals into his Majesty's hands, which his Majesty was pleased to deliver to his grace the duke of New castle, and to the right honourable the earl of Harrington. And thus endeth the second and last part of this assorbing administration, which lasted forty-eight hours, three quarters, feven minutes and eleven feconds; which may truly be called the most wise and most honest of all administrations; the minister having, to the astonishment of all men, never transacted one rash thing; and, what is more marvellous, left as much money in the treasury as he found in it. This worthy history I have faithfully recorded in this mighty volume, that it may be read with the valuable works of our immortal countryman Thomas Thumb, by our children, grand-children, and great-grand-children, to the end of the world.

A LETTER OF RECOMMENDATION FROM CARDINAL RICHLIEU.

is to be the bearer to you of some news from me, by means of this letter: he is one of the most vicious persons that I ever yet knew, and hath earneftly defired me to give him a letter for you of recommendation, which to his importunity I have granted; for he deferves greatly your effeem, and I should be forry you should be backward to oblige him by being mistaken in not knowing him, I shou'd be concern'd if you were as very many others have been already upon that account, who are of my best friends. Hence, and for no other motive, I am defirous to advertise you tuat you are obliged for my sake to take especial notice of him, and to fay nothing before him in any fort; for I may truly affure you, there can't be a more convincing argument of an unworthy person in the world, than to be able to injure him. I am fure, that as foon as you cease being a stranger to his virtue, & have any acquaintance with him, you will love him as well as I, and I shall receive thanks for the advice. The assurance I have of your Civility hindereth me to write farther of him to you, or to say any more on the subject.

Mr. Campoa, Savoyard and Frier, of the holy order of St. Bennet, discreet, wife, and amongst all I have conversed with, to write to you in his favour, and credence in his behalf and my merit (I affure you) rather than his to pay him all possible respect, that may offend or displease him fay, he is a worthy man, and

THE LITCHFIELD DEFEAT .

GOD prosper long our noble king!
Our lives and safeties all;
A woful horse-race late there did
At Whittington befall.

Great Bedford's duke, a mighty prince!

A folemn vow did make,

His pleafure in fair Staffordshire

Three Summer's days to take,

At once to grace his father's race,
And to confound his foes:
But ah! (with grief my Muse does speak)
A luckless time he chose.

For some rude clowns, who long had sekt
The weight of Tax and Levy,
Explain'd their case unto his Grace
By arguments full heavy.

At Litchfield races, in 1748, a riot happened upon the race-ground (Whittington Heath), in which the late duke of Bedford, and other gentlemen, were insulted and beaten. The rioters (the chief of whom was a Mr. Toll, dancing-master) were afterwards tried at the next Stafford affizes, and fined 6s. 6d. each for this offence.

"No Gow'r! they cry'd; no tool of pow'r!"

At that the e-l turn'd pale:----

" No Gow'r, no Gow'r, no tool of pow'r.!"

Re-echo'd from each dale.

Then Bedford's mighty breast took fire, Who thus, enrag'd, did cry,

"To horse, my Lords, my Knights, and 'Squires; We'll be reveng'd, or die."

They mounted ftraight, all men of birth, Captains of land and sea;
No prince or potentate on earth
Had such a troop as he.

Great lords and lordships close conjoin'd,
A shining squadron stood:
But to their cost, the yeoman host
Did prove the better blood.

"A Gow'r, a Gow'r! ye fons of whore,
"Vile fpawn of Babylon!"
This faid, his G—ce did mend his pace,
And came full fiercely on.

Three times he smote a sturdy soe;
Who undismay'd reply'd,

"Or be thou devil, or be thou d—ke,

"Thy courage shall be try'd."

The

The charge began; but on one fide Some flackness there was found; The smart cockade in dust was laid, And trampled on the ground.

Some felt fore thwacks upon their backs, Some, pains within their bowels; All who did joke the Royal Oak Were well rubb'd with its towels.

Then terror seiz'd the plumed troop,
Who turn'd themselves to slight;
Foul rout and sear brought up the rear:
Oh! 'twas a piteous sight!

Each warrior urg'd his nimble fleed;
But none durft look behind;
Th' infulting foe; they well did know
Had got them in the wind;

Who ne'er loft fcent until they came
Under the gallows tree:

- " Now, faid their foes, we'll not oppose "Your certain destiny.
- " No farther help of our's ye lack,
 "Grant mercy with your doom!
- "Trust to the care o' th' three-legg'd mare;
 "She'll bring you all safe home."

Then

Then wheel'd about, with this loud shout,
"Confusion to the Rump!"

Leaving each knight to mourn his plight

Beneath the triple stump.

Now Heav'n preserve such hearts as these From secret treachery! Who hate a knave, and scorn a slave, May such be ever free!

A TARPAULIN OPINION UPON SOME NEW PRO-MOTIONS.

JACK reckons up the admirals we have,
And wonders what a plague we mean by new?
Why, faith! half these might serve, if half were brave,

But twice as many cowards are too few.

AN EPIGRAM

SAYS Watkin to Cotton, "I thought my lord Gower" (You told me) intended to leave us no more."
Says Cotton, 'He has not.'—SaysWatkin, "You lye.

- "And you too, Sir John, have a place + by the bye.
- " I thought all your boastings would end in a farce;
- " Pray where's the Broad Bottom?" Says Cotton, 'My arfe.'

† Which happened to prove true.

WRITTEN

WRITTEN UNDER THE PICTURE OF DR. MAYTER,
RISHOP OF NORWICH,

SOON AFTER HE WAS DISMISSED FROM HIS POST OF GOVERNOR TO THE PRINCE OF WALES IN 1752.

NOT gentler virtues glow'd in Cambray's breaft,
Not more his young Telemachus was bless'd;
'Till envy, faction, and ambitious rage
Drove from a guilty court the pious sage.
Back to his slock with transport he withdrew,
And but one sigh, an honest one he knew!
O guard my royal pupil, heav'n! he said;
Let not his youth be, like my age, betray'd!
I would have form'd his sootseps in thy way—
But "vice prevails, and impious men bear sway."

AN ODE

TO THE MOST UNPOPULAR MAN LIVING. WRITTEN IN THE YEAR 1753.

SIR, while your heart with transport glows To find your most important nose

Lost in your P—s ear;
Perceive you not, with strange surprize,
How Fortune smiles on some folks lyes,
Tho' Truth herself appear?

While

tion, which lasted forty-eight hours, three quarters, feven minutes and eleven feconds; which may truly be called the most wife and most honest of all administrations; the minister having, to the astonishment of all men, never transacted one rash thing; and, what is more marvellous, left as much money in the treasury as he found in it. This worthy history I have faithfully recorded in this mighty volume, that it may be read with the valuable works of our immortal countryman Thomas Thumb, by our children, grand-children, and great-grand-children, to the end of the world.

A LETTER OF RECOMMENDATION FROM CARDINAL RICHLIEU.

Mr. Campoa, Savoyard and Frier, of the holy order of St. Bennet, is to be the bearer to you of some news from me, by means of this letter: he is one of the most vicious persons that I ever yet knew, and hath earneftly defired me to give him a letter for you of credence in his behalf and my recommendation, which to his importunity I have granted; for I should be forry you should be mistaken in not knowing him, as very many others have been already upon that account, who are of my best friends. Hence, and for no other motive, I am defirous to advertise you tuat you are obliged for my fare to take especial notice of him, and to fay nothing before him that may offend or displease him in any fort; for I may truly affure you, there can't be a more convincing argument of an unworthy person in the world, than to be able to injure him. 1 am iure, that as foon as you ceafe being a ftranger to his virtue, & have any acquaintance with him, you will love him as well as I, and I shall receive thanks for the advice. The assurance I have of your Civility hindereth me to write farther of him to you, or to fay any more on the subject.

difcreet, wife, and amongst all I have conversed with, to write to you in his favour, and merit (I affure you) rather than his he delerves greatly your efteem, and backward to oblige him by being I should be concern'd if you were to pay him all possible respect, fay, 'he is a worthy man, and

THE LITCHFIELD DEFEAT .

GOD prosper long our noble king!
Our lives and safeties all;
A woful horse-race late there did
At Whittington befall.

Great Bedford's duke, a mighty prince!
A folemn vow did make,
His pleasure in fair Staffordshire
Three Summer's days to take,

At once to grace his father's race,

And to confound his foes:
But ah! (with grief my Muse does speak)

A luckless time he chose.

For some rude clowns, who long had sek The weight of Tax and Levy, Explain'd their case unto his Grace By arguments full heavy.

At Litchfield races, in 1748, a riot happened upon the race-ground (Whittington Heath), in which the late duke of Bedford, and other gentlemen, were infulted and beaten. The rioters (the chief of whom was a Mr. Toll, dancing-master) were afterwards tried at the next Stafferd affizes, and fined 6s. 6d. each for this offence.

tion, which lasted forty-eight hours, three quarters, feven minutes and eleven feconds; which may truly be called the most wise and most honest of all administrations; the minister having, to the astonishment of all men, never transacted one rash thing; and, what is more marvellous, left as much money in the treasury as he found in it. This worthy history I have faithfully recorded in this mighty volume, that it may be read with the valuable works of our immortal countryman Thomas Thumb, by our children, grand-children, and great-grand-children, to the end of the world.

A LETTER OF RECOMMENDATION FROM CARDINAL RICHLIEU.

is to be the bearer to you of some news from me, by means of this letter: he is one of the most discreet, wise, and vicious persons that I ever yet knew, and hath earnestly defired me to give him a letter for you of credence in his behalf and my recommendation, which to his merit (I affare you) rather than his importunity I have granted; for he deserves greatly your effeem, and I should be forry you should be backward to oblige him by being miftaken in not knowing him, I shou'd be concern'd if you were as very many others have been already upon that account, who are of my best friends. Hence, and for no other motive, I am definous to advertife you trust you are obliged for my fame to take especial notice of him, to pay him all possible respects. and to fay nothing before him that may offend or displease him in any fort; for I may truly fay, the is a worthy man, and affu e you, there can't be a more convincing argument of unworthy person in the world, than to be able to injure him. 1 am iure, that as foon as you cease being a firanger to his virtue. have any acquaintance with him, you will love him as well as I, and I shall receive thanks for the advice. The assurance I have of you Civility hindereth me to write farther of him to you, or to the any more on the fubject.

Mr. Campoa, Savoyard and Frier, of the holy order of St. Bennet, amongst all I have conversed with, to write to you in his favour, and 2

The charge began; but on one fide Some flackness there was found; The smart cockade in dust was laid, And trampled on the ground.

Some felt fore thwacks upon their backs, Some, pains within their bowels; All who did joke the Royal Oak Were well rubb'd with its towels.

Then terror seiz'd the plumed troop,
Who turn'd themselves to slight;
Foul rout and sear brought up the rear:
Oh! 'twas a piteous sight!

Each warrior urg'd his nimble fleed;

But none durft look behind;

Th' infulting foe; they well did know

Had got them in the wind;

Who ne'er lost scent until they came
Under the gallows tree:
"Now, said their soes, we'll not oppose
"Your certain destiny.

" No farther help of our's ye lack,
"Grant mercy with your doom!
"Trust to the care o' th' three-legg'd mare;
"She'll bring you all safe home."

Then

Then wheel'd about, with this loud shout,
"Confusion to the Rump!"

Leaving each knight to mourn his plight

Beneath the triple stump.——

Now Heav'n preserve such hearts as these From secret treachery! Who hate a knave, and scorn a slave, May such be ever free!

A TARPAULIN OPINION UPON SOME NEW PRO-MOTIONS.

JACK reckons up the admirals we have, And wonders what a plague we mean by new? Why, faith! half these might serve, if half were brave,

But twice as many cowards are too few.

AN EPIGRAM.

SAYS Watkin to Cotton, "I thought my lord Gower" (You told me) intended to leave us no more."
Says Cotton, 'He has not.'—Says Watkin, "You lye.

- "And you too, Sir John, have a place + by the bye.
- "I thought all your boastings would end in a farce;
- " Pray where's the Broad Bottom?" Says Cotton, 'My arfe.'

† Which happened to prove true.

WRITTEN

WRITTEN UNDER THE PICTURE OF DR. MAYTER,
RISHOP OF NORWICH,

SOON AFTER HE WAS DISMISSED FROM HIS POST OF GOVERNOR TO THE PRINCE OF WALES IN 1752.

NOT gentler virtues glow'd in Cambray's breaft,
Not more his young Telemachus was bless'd;
'Till envy, faction, and ambitious rage
Drove from a guilty court the pious sage.
Back to his slock with transport he withdrew,
And but one sigh, an honest one he knew!
O guard my royal pupil, heav'n! he said;
Let not his youth be, like my age, betray'd!
I would have form'd his sootsteps in thy way—
But "vice prevails, and impious men bear sway."

AN ODE

TO THE MOST UNPOPULAR MAN LIVING. WRITTEN IN THE YEAR 1753.

SIR, while your heart with transport glows To find your most important nose

Lost in your P—s ear;
Perceive you not, with strange surprize,
How Fortune smiles on some folks lyes,
Tho' Truth herself appear?

While

At length a troop of horse came down, And quarter'd in a neighb'ring town. The cornet he was tall and young, And had a most bewitching tongue. They saw and lik'd. The siege begun, Each hour he some advantage won. He ogled first ;- she turn'd away ;-But met his eyes the following day. Then her reluctant hand he seizes: That foon she gives him, when he pleases. Her ruby lips he next attacks :-She struggles; -in a while she smacks. Her snowy breast he then invades: That yields too after some parades; And of that fortress once possest. He quickly masters all the rest. No longer now a dupe to fame, She smothers or resists her slame. But loves without or fear or shame.

So have I feen the Tory race
Long in the pouts for want of place,
Never in humour, never well,
Wishing for what they dar'd not tell;
Their heads with country notions fraught,
Notions in town not worth a groat;
These tenets all reluctant quit,
And step by step at last submit
To reason, eloquence, and Pitt.

WRITTEN UNDER THE PICTURE OF DR. MAYTER,
RISHOP OF NORWICH,

SOON AFTER HE WAS DISMISSED FROM HIS POST OF GOVERNOR TO THE PRINCE OF WALES IN 1752.

NOT gentler virtues glow'd in Cambray's breaft,
Not more his young Telemachus was bless'd;
'Till envy, faction, and ambitious rage
Drove from a guilty court the pious sage.
Back to his slock with transport he withdrew,
And but one sigh, an honest one he knew!
O guard my royal pupil, heav'n! he said;
Let not his youth be, like my age, betray'd!
I would have form'd his sootsteps in thy way—
But "vice prevails, and impious men bear sway."

AN ODE

TO THE MOST UNPOPULAR MAN LIVING.
WRITTEN IN THE YEAR 1753.

SIR, while your heart with transport glows To find your most important nose

L'ost in your P—s ear;
Perceive you not, with strange surprize,
How Fortune smiles on some folks lyes,
Tho' Truth herself appear?

While

While your wife counsels, and your cares
Affect a nation's vast affairs,

A kingdom, and a _____,

Is all your breaft calm and ferene,

As when you walk'd on * Winton's Green,

And dreamt of no fuch thing?

Envy, you'll fay, your worth attends
Maliciously, like treach'rous friends,
Perfidious to their trust;
Nor may ev'n Fortune's fav'rites stad,
That they alone, of all mankind,
Escape by being just.

But fay, fince in a luckless hour
You roll in wealth, and rose to pow'r,
How relish you the scene?
Is then ambition quite as blest
As she in Fancy's garb is drest?—
How feel you, Sir, within?

Can you reflect, without remorfe?

I fear you can—fo much the worfe—

But, Sir, How are your dreams?

Free are they all from guilt and fear?

See you not injur'd Norwich there,

Or Harcourt crofs the Thames?

The family feats

Or feem you lightly fill to rife In visionary dignities,

With nothing to retard?
With ev'n Britannia's council's fet,
To weigh your merit to the flate,
And give the due reward!

Or wakeful to your country's call, Say rather, can't you sleep at all?

—Not sleep a wink?—Yet know For such desert, a proper state Is fix'd by the decrees of fate

-Amongst the shades below.

- Pirithous and the ‡ Lapithæ, Stretch'd at the royal banquet see-
- Pirithous. A man who, to accomplish his ambitious views, went to hell, and was torn in pieces by Cerberus.
- 1 Lapithæ. A people of Theffaly, who violated the laws of hospitality, at a prince's table.

Quid memorem Lapithas, Ixonia, Pirithoumque? Quos super atra Silex jam jam lapsura, cadentique Imminet assimilis. Lucent genialibus altis Aurea fulcra toris, epulæque ante ora paratæ Regisico luxu: Furiarum maxima juxta Accubat, et manibus prohibet contingere mensas, Exurgitque facem attollens, atque intonat ore.

VIRG. Lib. 6.

Thus

Yet never did I yield my charms, Till honour led me to his arms. My charms I never basely sold; I am no profitute for gold; On my own rents I liv'd before, Nor has my William added more. Wealth is our scorn; our humble labours Aim but to serve, or save our neighbours. See—Heav'n has bleft our chafte embrace: Behold this little fmiling race, The offspring of an honest bed ;-Here, Senegal, hold up your head: This tawny boy, his parents' boaft, Shall bring us gold from Afric's coast. And mark these twins of Indian mien. This Louisbourg, and that Du Quesne: Their bold and honest looks presage .They'll be our comfort in old age. And if the babe that swells my womb. To a propitious birth shall come, O'erjoy'd I'll bless the happy day, And call our child America.

Thus Cælia spake with modest grace, But rage desorm'd the harlot's face a Her sirey eyes began to roll, A hag in look, a siend in soul:

C :

And

And now she vomits forth the din Of oyster-wenches drunk with gin. Nay, rumour scruples not to tell ye, The strumpet kick'd the matron's belly, Of the fair coming birth asraid; For black abortion was her trade.

CORINNA VINDICATED.

CORINNA, Virtue's child, and chafte
As vestal maid of yore,
Nor sought the nuptial rites in haste,
Nor yet those rites forswore.

Her, many a worthless knight, to wed, Pursu'd in various shapes; But she, tho' chusing not to lead, Weuld not be led by—apes.

Roysters they were, and each a mere Penelope's gallant; They eat and drank up all her cheer, And lov'd her into want.

See her by Walpole first address'd, (But Walpole caught a tartar) Him while an ill-earn'd ribband grac'd, She wore a nobler garter. [33]

A pair of brothers next advance,
Alike for business sit:
The silly 'gan to kick and prance,
And spurn the Pelham bit.

But who comes next? O well I ken
Him playing fast and loose;
Cease, Fox, the prey will ne'er be thine,
Corinna's not a goose.

See, last the man by heav'n design'd, To make Corinna blest; To ev'ry virtuous act inclin'd, All patriot in his breast.

He woo'd the fair with manly fense, And, flattery apart, By dint of sterling eloquence, Subdu'd Corinna's heart.

She gave her hand—but less her hand, So giv'n, should prove a curse, The priess omitted, by command, "For better and for worse."

[34]

SOME STANZAS,

ADDRESSED TO NO MINISTER NOR GREAT MAN.

WITH all thy titles, all thy large estate,
And all the favours which a King can grant,
Something is wanting still to make THEE great,
And still that something THOU wilt ever want.

For is it greatness, at a sumptuous board
To feast a county, and to hear thy name
'Mid noisy revels rictously roar'd,
When longer than the banquet lasts not fame?

Or is it greatness in the pomp of pow'r Each morn a crowd obsequious to collect, Pleas'd to accept th' obeisance of an hour, When with the levee endeth all respect!

He who is great, some nobler purpose shews:
Nor seasts nor levees HIS attention claim:
That which is fit and right he first pursues,
And after finds it justify'd by same.

What tho' a fawning academic train,
O shame to learning! on thy footsteps wait;
Tho' flatt'ring muses in a courtly strain
Salute THEE pillar of the British state;

[35]

Yet in fair history's impartial page,
Penn'd nor in flatt'ring nor invective strain,
Truth will report THEE to the suture age
No statesman, but a courtier light and vain.

For hath THY civil prudence well upheld
The state, 'gainst foreign or domestic foe?
Was sierce rebellion by THY counsels quell'd?
By THEE averted Gallia's threaten'd blow?

Where was thy forefight, when the Gaul prepar'd To seize the provinces of Albion's realm? That foul disgrace with THEE tho' OTHERS shar'd, Yet seiz'd they were when THOU wert at the helm.

And the once more Britannia lifts her head,
By pow'rful nations fees herself rever'd,
And haits her valiant sons by glory led
T' assault that realm whence late assault she fear'd;

Yet from their deeds no honour THOU can'ft gain,
Tho' vict'ry's laurels should their brows entwine:
For when did'st THOU their arduous toils maintain?
Or of their bold exploits which plan was THINE?

Did'st thou secure the harvest of the land Amid invasion's threat and war's alarm? When martial weapons sill'd the reaper's hand, Was it thy voice exhorted him to arm?

C 4

Have .

Have fleets and armies by THY orders mov'd
To distant lands and oceans far remote?
And when success those orders hath approv'd,
Do crowds THY wisdom and THY spirit note?

Yet in the triumph THOU affum'st a share, Bushing, important, full of giddy zeal; And vainly sit'st with ministerial air, A sly of state on glory's chariot-wheel.

S T A N Z A S

ADDRESSED TO A GREAT MINISTER AND GREAT MAN.

WITH titles, honours, and a large estate,
And all a favour'd subject can possess,
Can aught be wanting still to make thee great,
Or can envonom'd slander make thee less?

For fure 'tis greatness nobly to disdain
The high rewards that wait the statesman's toils,
And rather, with unsparing hand, to drain
Thy private wealth, than share the public spoils.

And fure 'tis greatness, to the Muse's choir
Thy fost'ring care and bounty to extend,
With royal smiles her grateful train to fire,
And Attic grace with Spartan morals blend.

Who, such a length of years, 'midst party rape'
And veering patriots, with deserv'd applause,
In place, in pow'r, has shewn, from youth to age,
True to his King and to his country's cause?

On whose firm credit, ere the terms were known, Have Britain's wealthy sone so oft rely'd, In whom such boundless considence been shewn, Or on whose word such millions been supply'd!

Hence to thy toils each distant nation pays
That just regard which envy here denies;
Hence, future annals shall record thy praise,
And lasting trophies to thy honour rise.

Who, when of old the public torrent ran,
With boilt'rous rage, polluted from its source,
In early life, with care and cost began
To check, to turn, and regulate its course?

Who, unreproach'd, has fince for half an age,
In freedom's cause such stedsast zeal approv'd?
Who could th' esteem of Sire and Son engage,
By each entrusted, and by each belov'd?

And the detraction now these wreaths would tear,

And break these bands whence all our triumphs flow,

Who plac'd our Tully in the conful's chair?

To whose advice this statesman do we owe?

C 5 Says

Say, when Horsensius in the senate rose,
Who on his rival fix'd his sov'reign's choice?
That well weigh'd choice, deplor'd by Britain's soes,
And prais'd with transport by the public voice.

Still may the world, diftinguish d pair, behold
What bliss your country to this union owes!
Still to the winds her conquiring flags unfold,
And pour her strength collected on her foes!

And oh! in glorious radiance tho' the flies
Of envy float, on brisk but transient wing,
Their harmless rage regard with scornful eyes,
Nor heed their buzz—you cannot fear their sting.

EPIGRAM ON THE BATTLE OF MINDEN.

In antient times the Roman laws decreed
A fure reward for ev'ry martial deed;
And he who fav'd one Roman life, 'tis faid,
A Civic crown embrac'd the hero's head.—
—Hail happy times, and justly Golden nam'd!
He gave rewards where Britons would be blam'd,
He now, who faves our men, no crown obtains;
Who faves our ships, we shoot him for his pains.
Since these are so, it follows then of course,
Small's the reward "for him who saves our horse,"

ON MR. PITT'S RESIGNATION, IN 1761.

NE'er yet in vain did heav'n its omens send; Some dreadful ills unusual signs portend! When Pitt resign'd, a nation's tears will own, "Then sell the brightest jewel in the crown."

ON THE DISMISSION

OF EARL TEMPLE FROM THE LIEUTENANCY OF

THE COUNTY OF BUCKS, IN 1763.

To honour virtue in the lord of Stowe,
The pow'r of courtiers can no further go;
Forbid him court, from council blot his name,
E'en these distinctions cannot rase his same.
Friend to the liberties of England's state,
'Tis not to courts he looks to make him great;
He to his much lov'd country trusts his cause,
And dares affert the honour of her laws.

ON THE THIRTIETH OF NOVEMBER,
BEING ST. ANDREW'S DAY, AND THE BIRTH-DAY
OF THE PRINCESS BOWAGER OF WALES.

HAIL black November, in whose foggy rear Rich Autumn lingers ere he leaves the year; The late ripe cath'rine peach adorns thy train, And luscious medlars rot beneath thy reign.

C 6

And

And now while Andrew and Augusta smile; Charming new suns to chear our gloomy isle; In the same slow'ry bed fair union shews, Beauteously twin'd, a thistle and a rose.

STANZAS BY LORD CAPEL;
WRITTEN WHEN HE WAS A PRISONER IN THE TOWER, DURING CROMWELL'S USURPATION.

I.

BEAT on, proud billows; Boreas, blow; Swell, curled waves, high as Jove's roof; Your incivilities do plainly shew, That innocence is tempest proof. Tho furly Nereus frowns, my thoughts are calm: Then strike, assistion, for thy wounds are balm.

ŦF.

That which the world miscalls a jail;
A private closet is to me;
Whilst a good conscience is my bail,
And innocence my liberty:
Locks, bars, and solitude, together met,
Make me no pris'ner, but an anchoret.

III.

Here sin, for want of food, must starve, Where tempting objects are not seen; And these strong walls do only serve 'Yo keep rogues out, and keep me in.

Malice

[41]

Malice is now grown charitable, fure; I'm not committed, but I'm kept fecure.

IV.

And whilft I wish to be retir'd,
Into this private room I'm turn'd;
As if their wisdom had conspir'd
The salamander should be burn'd.
Or, like those sophists who would drown a fish,
I am condemn'd to suffer what I wish.

V.

The Cynic hugs his poverty,
The pelican her wilderness;
And 'tis the Indian's pride to be
Naked on frozen Caucasus.
Contentment feels no smart; stoics, we see,
Make torments easy by their apathy.

Vŀ.

I'm in this cabinet lock'd up,

Like fome high-prized margarite;

Or like fome great mogul or pope,

I'm cloister'd up from public fight.

Retir'dness is a part of majesty,

And thus, proud sultan, I'm as great as thee.

VII. Thefe

[42]

VII.

These manacles upon mine arm
I as my mistress favours wear;
And for to keep mine ancles warm,
I have some iron shackles there.
These walls are but my garrison; this cell,
Which men call jail, doth prove my citadeli

VIII.

Thus he that struck at Jason's life,

Thinking to make his purpose sure,

By a malicious friendly knife

Did only wound him to his cure.

Malice, we see, wants wit; for what is meant

Mischief, oft-times proves favour by th' events

IX.

Altho' I cannot fee my king,

Neither in person, nor in coin;

Yet contemplation is a thing

That renders what I have not, mine.

My king from me no adamant can part,

Whom I do wear engraven in my heart.

X.

Have you not heard the nightingale,
A pris'ner close kept in a cage,
How she doth chant her wonted tale
In that her narrow hermitage?

Ev.n.

[43]

Ev'n that her melody doth plainly prove, Her boughs are trees, her cage a pleasant grove.

XI.

My foul is free as is the ambient air,
Which doth my outward parts include;
Whilft loyal thoughts do still repair
To company my folitude.
What tho' they do with chains my body bind,
My king can only captivate my mind.

XII.

I am that bird which they combine
Thus to deprive of liberty;
And tho' my corpse they can confine,
Yet mangre that my soul is free.
Tho' I'm mew'd up, yet I can chirp and sing,
Disgrace to rebels, glory to my king.

In some copies of this poem tha following stanza is inserted between the seventh and eighth:

When once my prince affliction hath,

Prosperity doth treason seem;

And for to smooth so rough a path,

I can learn patience from him.

But now to suffer shews a legal part;

When kings want ease, subjects must learn to smart.

But this stanza utterly destroys the uniformity of the poem, and is inconsistent with every other part of it. The design of the whole is, to represent as benefits what had by his enemies been intended as punishments, and to shew, that "malice wants wit to effect its purpose:" but this stanza contains an acknowledgment, that malice has effected its purpose upon him; that he suffers; and that it is sit he should suffer. For this reason, and because it is not in all copies, it is omitted in this, either as composed by the author, and afterwards rejected, or as interpolated by some other.

VERSES

BY SIR WALTER RALEIGH.

GO foul, the body's guest,
Upon a thankless errant,
Fear not to touch the best,
The truth shall be thy warrant.
Go, since I needs must dye,
And give them all the lye.

Go, tell the court it glowse
And shines like painted wood;
Go, tell the church it showes
What's good, does no good.
If court and church replye,
Give court and church the lye.

Tell

Tell potentates they live
Acting, but oh! their actions
Not lov'd unless they give!
Not strong, but by their factions.
If potentates replye,
Give potentates the lye.

Tell me not of high condition,
That rule affairs of state;
Their purpose is ambition;
Their practice only hate.
And if they do replye,
Then give them all the lye.

Tell those that brave it moste,
They begge more by spendinge;
Who, in their greatest coste,
Seek nothing but commendinge.
And if they make replye,
Spare not to give the lye.

Tell zeal it lacks devotion;
Tell love it is but luste;
Tell time it is but motion;
Tell slesh it is but duste.
And wish them not replye,
For thou must give the lye.

Tell age it daily wasteth;
Tell honour how it alters;
Tell beautye that it blasteth;
Tell favour that she falters.
And as they do replye,
Give every one the lye.

Tell wit how much it wrangles
In fickle points of niceness;
Tell wisdom she entangles
Herself in over-wiseness.
And if they do replye,
Then give them both the lye.

Tell physick of her holdness;
Tell skill it is pretension;
Tell charity of coldness;
Tell law it is contention.
And if they yield replye,
Then give them skill the lye.

Tell fortune of her blindness;
Tell nature of decay;
Tell friendship of unkindness;
Tell justice of delay.
And if they do replye,
Then give them all the lye.

Tell artes they have no foundness, But vary by esteeminge; Tell skollers lack profoundness, And stand too much on seeminge. If artes and skollers replye, Give artes and skollers the lye.

Tell faith its fled the cittye;
Tell how the country errethe;
Tell manhood shakes of pytie;
Tell virtue least preferreth.
And if they do replye,
Spare not to give the lye.

So when thou haft, as I
Commanded thee, done blabbing;
Althoughe to give the lye
Deferves no less than flabbing;
Yet stab at thee who will,
No stab the soul can kift.

A PARODY ON THE FOREGOING,

WRITTEN IN 1764.

GO, truth, unwelcome gueft!

Upon a thankless errant;

Fear not to touch the best,

For truth is a sase warrant.

Go, since thou needs must die,

And give them all the lye.

Go, tell the Tory faction,
Now in their noontide hour,
England won't bear an action
Of an arbitrary power.
If Tories should reply,
Give Tories all the lye.

Go, tell th' ennobled thief,
While cares oppress him most,
He ne'er shall taste relief
From guilt—from Aylisse's ghost.
And if the thief reply,
'Then give the thief the lye.

Go, tell the Scottish Thane,
Rais'd high by r—— lust,
That lust shall prove his bane,
And lay him in the dust.
And should the Thane reply,
Then say proud Thane you sye.

Go, tell the immortal Pitt,
Author of England's glory,
He shall recorded sit
Foremost in future story.

* * * Cætera defunt.

EPIGRAM.

EPIGRAM.

SAY when will England be from faction freed?
When will domestic quarrels cease?
Ne'er till that wish'd-for epitaph we read,
"Here lies the man that made the peace." E. G.

A SINGULAR ADVERTISEMENT VERSIFIED.

TO THE GENTLEMEN, CLERGY, AND FREEHOLDERS

OF THE COUNTY OF GLOUCESTER *.

A Courtier profess'd, much esteem'd by the great, As a weather-cock fixt to a point, or as fate, I fend my best compliments round the whole shire: A steady old boy, and a young voluntier: Tho' as fate I am fix'd, and resolv'd to abide, In turns, as it happens, by this or that side;

 To the Gentlemen, Clergy, and Freeholders of the county of Gloucester.

GENTLEMEN,

THOUGH I am fixed as fate, to abide by the determination of the general meeting of the 13th instant, permit me to detlare my wishes that Lord Coleraine may be the object of your choice, as I know him to be a man of honour and principle, and most obnoxious to the late convention of the 28th of March.

I have the honour to be,

Grosvenor-fireet,
April 4, 1763.

Gentlemen, Your obliged and devoted fervant,

N. BERKLEY.

Permit

Permit me, good people, to now recommend
This very good lord, and my very good friend;
Pray let him have yours, as I give him my voice,
And make this choice object your object of choice.
I know him—that's all—he will stick to his plan,
Like a harmless, obnoxious, pretty fort of a man.
My merits you know, and you'll thank me, I'm clear,
For thinking so much of your cyder this year:
In behalf of which tax I'd be proud to divide,
Tho' the whole house oppos'd, with my friend on my side.

Obnoxious I am, and obnoxious is he, And obnoxious this lord—so obnoxious all three. I rely on your savours—so grant me this suit, And depend on my service to tell my Lord Bute.

ON LORD BOTETOURT'S

BEING APPOINTED GOVERNOR OF VIRGINIA,

IN THE ROOM OF SIR JEFFERY AMHERST,

DISMISSED.

Now tremble, colonists! your time is come:
From matchless genius wait your settled doom.
C-nw-y no more shall weave your silken chains;
Play with your bit, or trisse with your reins.
Fame sends his son to curb your slaming state;
'Tis Botetourt, and he is six'd as sate.
L. V.

• Sir J----d.

ON A CERTAIN LAWYER'S

TAKING A PATENT OF PRECEDENCE IN 1764.

SEE! from his colours turncoat Yorke retreat!

And humbly cast himself at Grenville's seet;

Warm from his heart, in copious music now,

Prerogative's melodious accents flow;

While tame servility, with longing eyes,

Courts, and would hope, a Henley's seal the prize †.

Why lives not Churchill's spirit to rehearse

Such prostitution in immortal verse;

And, on the strong soundation of such shame,

Erect a monument to Norton's same?

Tho' dead the muse, yet hist'ry still remains,

And truth, to blush at such unmanly strains.

ON MR. YORKE'S TAKING A PATENT OF PRECEDENCE IN 1764.

The late Hen. Charles Yorke.

† Lord Henley, afterwards Earl of Northington, was at that time Lord Chancellor.

1 Norton, afterwards Lord Grantley.

EPIGRAM

EPIGRAM

ON A COUNSELLORS'S HAVING HIS HAT STOLEN IN WESMINSTER-HALL.

SHOULD'ST thou to justice, honest thief, be led, Swear that you stole his hat who had no head. That plea alone all danger shall remove, Nor judge nor jury can the damage prove.

AN ODE, 1764.

WHENCE can arise these dread alarms?
Why are the rabble up in arms?
And why this mighty faction?
No Mary Squires, no Cock-lane ghost,
No witch to drown, no priest to roast,
No batteaux-plats upon our coast,
To keep their minds in action:

Nor lord to hang, nor chief to shoot,
No bonsires now for Clive or Coote,
No Indian spoils to share.

That Halifax distress'd our trade,
How much his service was o'er-paid,
And what a shameful peace we made,
Is all an old affair.

Implore

Implore of Heaven some phantom new,

Till war shall be again in view,

To keep the people quiet; Else shall we be at wondrous pains, Since there's no foe abroad remains, To knock out one another's brains,

In party-feuds and riot.

Who then to feek in fuch a case But those true patriots out of place,

Those only men of merit; Not who from principle resign'd, But those not let to stay behind, They always can an object find

That's worthy fuch a spirit.

Yes, when their hopeful schemes are crost, Their incense gone, their sal'ries lost,

They've quite sufficient reason; (So 't'as been judg'd, at least of late,) To set at variance King and state, That perturbation to create,

But little short of treason.

How oft in this unfteady realm, Shall headfrong faction feize the helm

Thro' popular delusion!

Confess no Sov'reign but the mob,

And being each affign'd his job,

Their country thus combine to rob,

And spoil its constitution.

Ver. IV.

D

Chatham.

Chatham, thy cause was sure the worst, Yet own'd in ev'ry cause the first For virtues as for birth; Tears at thy death from all fides flow. But hadft thou died some years ago, The publick had not honour'd fo Thy then unfullied worth. Is there no praise, no glory due, To Gr-n- now, nor e'en to you When out of opposition? There S- is endear'd to fame, There C- too, a fav'rite name, Nor one nor t'other was to blame In fight or expedition. These all are bless'd with wealth and parts, With knowing heads and honest hearts; They love the common-weal; G ---- 's a p--- of vast renown. T ____ owes nothing to the crown, But cringing to a giddy town Displays a noble zeal. S has judgment, L fense, B harangues in mood and tenfe, H- fhews both wit and reading, T ____ stability and truth, P--- integrity and youth, Nor W--- nor B--- are uncouth In visage or in breeding.

Rare

[55]

Let's fift both parties man by man,
For ere fince government began,
E'en to this very hour,
The nation's faith has been abus'd,
We've been too eafily amus'd,
With cant of patriotism us'd,
To cover lust of pow'r.

[56]

APARODY

UPON THE FAMOUS BATTLE OF CHEVY CHASE,

GOD prosper long our noble King, Our lives and safeties all! What woeful discord once there did In Britain's isle befall!

To drive three kingdoms, hound and horn,

Earl St——— t took his way;

The child may rue that was not born

A Scotiman on that day.

The flout Earl of Northumberland A vow to God did make, A daughter of this Scottish peer's His son to wife should take;

The choicest honours of the land To win and bear away: The tidings to Earl Temple came, At Cotes's where he lay;

Who sent Lord Percy present word He would prevent his sport; The stately Earl, not fearing this, Did daily go to court,

With

With five and forty bowmans bold, All chosen men of might, Who knew full well in time of need, To cringe and bow aright.

And, ere the spring was o'er, they did A thousand boons obtain, Which once possess'd they shrewdly went To crave for more again.

The bowmans muster'd at Whitehalf †,
Their votes were all sectore;
And sixteen of the u—r h—e
Each day were guarded sure.

Wild Highlanders forfook their helds, Proud offices to take; And commissaries from the dales, Did princely fortunes make.

See Bowman in the farce of Lethe.
 † The Cockgit.

To Sion-house Earl Percy went, ('Twas in the Gazetteer;) Quoth he, Lord B— hath promised This day to meet me here;

If that I thought he would not come, No longer would I stay; With that his Lordship's gentleman Did on the stair-case say,

- " Lo! yonder doth Lord B— appear,
 " I fee his flar fo bright;
- " Full twenty yeomen, clad in plaids,
 " Are marching in our fight,
- " All men of pleasant Tiviotdale,
 " Fast by the river Tweed;"
 Then call my son, (the C——s said)
 And sign the deeds with speed.

For now to the degree of Duke
My husband I'll advance;
And while he pranks it here at home,
Why I'll parade in France.

The bridegroom spoke the lady fair, Then mounted on his horse, And so without his beaver rode, Like Charles of Charing-cross, He wish'd for tilts and tournaments,

That he might break a spear:

The C——s, with a herald's voice,

Proclaim'd it far and near.

Young Percy on his long-tail'd fleed, Most like a warrior bold, Pranc'd formost of the company, His housing fring'd with gold.

Now all the chiefs in pow'r agreed,

That they might nothing fear,

To fend such terms to W-ll—m P—t

As he might deign to hear.

The first that did the tender make,
Was noble St——t, he,
Who said, If thou wilt list with us,
Thou pr—y s—l shalt be:

So we'll cajole the clam'rous throng, Whilft I am still in play; And half the charges of the state Thyself shalt give away.

Nay hear me, B—, the patriot cry'd,
For ere I hold with thee,
I know thee well, an Earl thou art,
I too an Earl must be.

[ 60]

Thy measures I will then adopt,
And all employments fill,
With Sh—lb—e, B———, and such folk,
Tho' they had done me ill.

Let thou and I the burden try, And fet the rest aside; Mackenzie to his post restor'd, Nor C-md-n's suit deny'd.

Then stepp'd a gallant 'Squire forth, Will B—ckf—d was his name; Who said, I would not have it told On London' Change, for shame;

That e'er such treaty was on foot,
While I stood looking on;
You are two Earls, faid Will B—ckf—d,
And I a 'Squire alone.

I'll do the best that do I may,
This session—if you stand,
And, for reward, I then shall claim
A peerage of the land.——

Our new allies did such dismiss
Were found not staunch and true;
The Yorkshire and the Sussex Whigs
At once they overthrew.

To drive the city hound and horn,.

Lord Ch——— m had the bent;

To move addresses at Guildhall,

In vain Hal, C—nw—fent.

To quell a mob themselves had rais'd,.
Were new expedients found,
Whilst many of our fairest laws
Lay trampled on the ground.

At last these two great Ear-it did meet, Like ministers of might, But for the nation's interest, Of that they made but slight.

They talk'd until they both did fweat,.
With an outrageous seal;
And hugely struggled which of them
Should rule the common-weal.

Yield thee, Earl Temple, C cy'd, In faith I will thee bring, Where thou shalt high advanced be

By G --- our British ---,

The public good I'll freely give,
And thus report of thee,
Thou art by far the fittest man
To head the tr--f--y.

With that there came a ftatefman keen,
Who long had lurk'd below;
And to Earl T——e's firm refolve
Did give the final blow.

Who never spoke more words than these,
"No terms I'll have at all,
"But with my gentle brother George
"Will hencesorth rise or fall."

Then stalking off, E-1 C- took
The tall man by the hand,
And said, E-1 T-e, for thy ease,
I'd give half Py-f-'s land.

O Lord! my very heart doth bleed With forrow for thy fake; For fure there's fcarce a Lord alive But would fuch bargain take.

A knight

A knight among the Scots there is, Whom no one dare deny; For him my cousin H-gl-y's wrath I must and shall defy.

Sir H—y R.ch-rt is he call'd, Of head and heart most bright; Nor do I know so quick a man For parlance or for fight.

He led our expeditions all, Without or dread or fear, And is in war, as politics, A hardy pioneer.

And there's a Duke of force and might 1s full a match for G—r;

Nor did he treat like Ro—k—m,

Who turn'd me from his door.

So thus did both these patriots jar,
Whose virtue none could stain;
E-1 Ch-said, I still perceive
We may be friends again.

He had a crutch beneath his arm,
Made of a trufty tree;
A paper in his gouty hand,
A cloth yard long, had he.

To this new list of pen—rs,

Some friends of Stowe he set;

E—1 T——e took and rubb'd them out,

E'en while the ink was wet.

Their squabbles held till close of day, From the meridian sun; And when they rung the dinner bell, The meat was overdone.

With the E-1 T-e there remain'd.

The Lord of L-ttl-t-n;

And with his Grace of Bloomsbury,

R-gby that bold Baron.

With fout Sir Fl-tch-r fell Sir C-les,
A scribe of good account;
And D-dsw-ll the exchequer man,
Whose prowess did surmount;

Now poor Sir John I needs must wail

Like one in doleful dumps;

For, getting on the tr--f-ry bench,

He never stirr'd his stumps.

And with old Winc — did fall
The sturdy doctor H—y;
Nor New — would quit the field
While he had strength to stay.

Nor S—d—h, nor yet Hal—x,.

Could either faved be;

Lord Car—f—t was carry'd off,

Against his will went he.

And the lord Eg—t in likewise

Forfook the admiralty;

And twenty more, or knights or p-rs,

Were shortly forc'd to fly.

Of fifty true-born Englishmen, Staid in but two or three; The rest live at their country-seats, Under the green-wood tree.

Next month will many m-mb--s come;.

Their rashness to bewail;

And say if they are not restored,.

Why they must go to jail.

Their wives do pisy fo much at cards,
And throw fuch fums away,
Would ferve to keep a score of w——s,
If they were clad in clay.

The news was unto Pasis brought;
And eke the court of Spain;
Earl Tem— in the ministry

Would scarce have weight again.

Oh heavy news! John Wilkes did fay, Churchill * can witness be. I have not any patron more Of such account as he.

Like tidings to St. I-s's came, Within a shorter space, That Richard Gr-v-e, lord of Stowe. Refus'd to take a pl-ce.

Then God be with him, faid the court. Sith 'twill no better be; We trust there are about the helm Five hundred good as he.

Yet shall not G-r nor W-tw-th say But we will vengeance take: And just revenge shall on them fall, For dearest St--'s sake.

This vow was then full well perform'd - ___ came to town; With P-s and P-C-rs, Men but of fl-t renown.

And of the rest of true account, Why they were all p-t by; To make a D--- of Sir H--- S--Who m-e him-f P-y.

· See CHURCHILL's fetires.

God fave the king, and blefs the land, In plenty, joy, and peace; And grant henceforth that all regard To b—th and m-rit cease.

W. Y. W.

A NEW POLITICAL CREED,

FOR THE YEAR MDCCLXVI.

Quicunque vult.

WHoever will be faved; before all things it is necessary that he should hold the Chatham faith.

Which faith, except every man keep whole and undefiled, without doubt he shall fink into oblivion.

And the Chatham faith is this: that we worship one minister in trinity, and the trinity in unity:

Neither confounding the persons, nor dividing the substance.

For the privy seal is a minister, the secretary is a minister, and the treasurer is a minister.

Yet there are not three ministers, but one minister; for the privy seal, the secretary, and the treafurer are all one.

Such as the privy feal is, such is the fecretary, and such is the treasurer.

The privy seal is self-create, the secretary is self-create, and the treasurer is self-create.

The

The privy seal is incomprehensible, the secretary is incomprehensible, and the treasurer is incomprehensible.

The privy seal is unresponsible, the secretary is unresponsible, and the treasurer is unresponsible.

And yet there are not three incomprehensibles, three self-created, or three unresponsibles: but one incomprehensible, or self-create, and one unresponsible.

For like as we are compelled by the Christian verity, to acknowledge every person by himself to be God and Lord:

So are we forbidden by the articles of the Chatham alliance, to fay there are three ministers:

So that in all things, the unity in triffity, and trinity in unity, are to be worshipped; and he who would be saved, must thus think of the ministry.

Furthermore, it is necessary to elevation, that he also believe rightly of the qualities of our minister.

For the right faith is, that we believe and confess, that this fon of man is something more than man; as total perfection, though of an unreasonable soul, and gouty slesh consisting.

Who fuffered for our falivation, descended into opposition, rose again the third time, and ascended into the house of peers.

He fitteth on the right hand of the _____, from whence he shall come to judge the good and the bad. And.

And they that have done good, shall go into patent places; and they that have done bad, shall go into everlasting opposition.

This is the Chatham faith; which, except a man believe faithfully, he cannot be promoted.

As he was in the beginning, he is now, and ever will be,

Then all the people, standing up, shall say,
O blessed and glorious trinisy, three persons and one minister, have mercy on us miserable subjects i

THE EARL

IMITATED FROM MORACE.

Icel, beatle nune Arabum Invides gasts, &c.
L. v. Od. 29.

My Lord! great commoner no more;
You number your new titles o'er,
Earl, Viscount, P-ns-nt, Ch-th-m:
Before you your supporters set,
Your ermine robes, and coronet,
And gaze in raptures at 'em.

What fervile bard shall greet your ear With the enchanting found of peer?

Delightfül:

Delightful name to mention!
What chaplain shall inform mankind,
With how much virtue you have join'd
A title to a pension!

Who can unroll the book of fate,
And tell what ministers of state
May govern this great nation?
Where is the prophet can disclose
What strange materials may compose
Some new administration?

Jacob Henriques, born to guide,
At privy-council may prefide,
And rule the common-weal;
Hill, fecretary we may fee,
Derrick lord chamberlain may be,
And Buckhorse privy seal:

Since you, once emulous of fame,
Have meanly barter'd your good name
For fcorn, contempt, and raillery;
Broke ev'ry promise you have made,
And shamefully together laid
The Pitt and upper gallery.

[71]

THE CORONET.

A 8'O N G.

HOW happy a state does lord C—m possess, Who would be no greater, nor fears to be less! On his pension and place he depends for support, Which is better than servilely cringing at court.

How bleft has his time been! what days has he known!

How fweet with fair E—r the moments have flown!
Since first in DOM. COM. his harangue he began,
Which convinced the whole house he was more than a man.

He bully'd Sir Robert, he censur'd the k—;
He rail'd at the garter, and call'd it a string:
He bellow'd and bawl'd, 'till his worship was hoarse,
"He'd be damn'd ere he'd thus be a cornet of horse."

He thunder'd so long, and he thunder'd so well, They thought 'twas a fiend that had broke loose from hell;

He rais'd such a din, and he made such a clatter, That Sir Robert, abash d, quite forgot all his matter.

What's now to be done, or what's now to be faid?

Quoth Sir Robert, I tremble, by G.-., for my head:

But

[72]

But to filence his clack, and to hide my difgrace.

I'll give cornet P— a vice-treasurer's place.

No longer a cornet, no longer a flave,
No longer the terror and scourge of a knave;
He yields to C——n, at B——y winks,
Now a patriot he rose, now a placeman he finks.

In the van of dame Fortune behold him advance,. With his place for a target, his tongue for a lance;. But depriv'd of his place, ambition was croft, And the cornet's gay hours in a moment were loft.

Now behold him a bellowing patriot again,
Like Demosthenes, stemming the torrent in vain.
See his eyes how they roll! hark his diction how strong!
Gods! how mellow his voice! his oration how long!

Thus oppos'd and opposing, the same tale he told,

"As he ne'er had been bought, so he ne'er would be:

"fold;"

That his country (fine words!) was far dearer than life!

Than the whole race of G———lles, than E—r hia wife.

How stubborn the trials which patriots endure!

Yet to conquer their whims, you must gild well the lure;

For

[73]

For we all know 'tis senseless, whate'er they may mutter.

To quarrel, like fools, with their bread and their butter.

To cut short my tale, and to close the last scene, Like a storm when 'tis hush'd, see the patriot serene; In a twinkling behold a bright coronet rise, How it ties up his tongue! how it dazzles his eyes!

With the hoard of mad Pynsent, a pension, a place, With a peerage, the badge of his lordship's disgrace; With a load of gold boxes, from boroughs and cities, With his blust'ring speeches, and half-written ditties.

May he spend, yet unpity'd, the rest of his days, Unambitious of sway, undeserving of praise; Unhuzza'd by a mob, unendear'd to his friends, Ever rack'd by the gout, ever tortur'd by siends!

Ye chronicle wits, ministerially wise,
Who to-morrow revere, what to-day ye despise;
Be my sentence confirm'd—since the die is now cast,

That a CORONET damns ev'ry patriot at last,"

A TRIFLER.

AN EPISTLE

TO A FRIEND IN THE COUNTRY #.

HAving heard that your doggrel's in mighty renown,

(For a great many people can read in this town)
And not without some little cause to expect
Such flatt'ry, as goes to one's heart to reject:
I have dipp'd in the standish, intending to try
My right-hand at verse—tho' the Muse is but shy.
You have heard of the wonderful works of one Pitt,
Who so oft in DOM. COM. has brought forth a good hit:

Lord! Sir, there was hardly a man of them all, If he wrestled with Will, but was sure of a sall. Since the days of Sir Richard †, renowned in song, No mortal has e'er been so loud or so long. With large words and Latin, in patriot oration, He led by the nose many heads of this nation; And, t'enable his spirits and purse to hold out, He receiv'd a fine snuff-box at ev'ry good bout; The lid and the rims were all lacquer'd with gold, And might, if they are not already, be sold; Mr. deputy Hodges, and arms of the city, I dare say together look wonderful pretty.

This epiftle has been ascribed to Chr. Ansty, esq;
 Blackmore. See the Dunciad.

The

The deputy deals in profound allegory,
And holds in his hand a good * key for history:
But as I was faying, or going to fay,
This Pitt was a marvellous man in his day:
He made us, like fo many bees in a hive,
Sweat and toil to pay taxes, that battle might thrive.
And really, dear friend, do but give him his due,
He made both the French and the Spaniards look blue.

Our foldiers most ardently pray'd for their foes,
And then beat their brains out, as all the world knows.
Our gen'ral once chanc'd to be slaughter'd--and then
Pitt said he was forry—said Beckford, Amen.
It would do your heart good, should you e'er come to town,

To hear how their parliament speeches go down:
There a party to swallow, a party to pour,
So the gulpers stand gaping for sense by the hour.
They're sure, honest souls! he can ne'er be in jest,
Who harangues till he's hoarse, and knocks oft on his breast.

In a winter or two, I suppose each oration,
Well chew'd, will again be spew'd out on the nation:
For the substance of matter continues the same,
As Newton avers, tho it changes its name;
So for aught one can tell, e'en this letter of mine
May make, turn'd to prose, a young senator shine.

* Vide speeches of common-council.

Three

Three mighty great things are time, manner, and place,

To give both our laws and ourselves a good face!

But I stop—for digressions, when once they've the rein,

Throw us off, tug as hard as we can at the mane.

A man that is gouty, or has a lame leg, Elsewhere for self-int'rest, may set up to beg; Not so at Saint Stephen's—when cripples come there,

All subscriptions requested, they solemnly swear,

Are for poor old Britannia, whose back is quite bare.

With one hand in slannel, and one on his side,

He would gently begin, like an infantine tide;

And, as that by degrees all the bank overflows,

So from whispers he soon came to brawling and blows:

"Face Germans may shift for themselves as they like;

As long as Great Britain has round her a dyke
To defend her from harm, let her rest in content;
Not a man, not a shilling, shall from her be sent."
This doctrine was orthodox only a while,
For he has, Sir, a vast variation of style.
Of late we have heard him rebuking his brother,
For provoking pert boys to bepis their own mother.

Me spoke like an angel, a great many say,
And beat six or seven quite out of their play,
Being serious and comic, being grave, being gay.
How are innocent quarrels embowel'd since then,
For statues to honour that best of all men!
Buckles, buttons, and study, in America worn,
Signs, ribbons, and tea-pots, with Pitt they adorn;
The good folks of Bath, to exceed all the rest,
Rous'd old royal Bladud, asseep in his nest;
They rous'd him, I say, when he strait fell a praising,
In strong black letter print, which was us'd former days in:

But now, that king Bladud's again under ground,
They have alter'd their tone, and are looking around
For the co-horns of rhyme with scurrility stor'd,
To sting at the head of the god they ador'd.
'Tis amazing to think, but the men of this land,
Who are not lords themselves, cannot oft understand
How virtue and sense can reside in a peer—
And Pitt is become my lord Chatham. I fear
This vulgar opinion 'bout lords is not true;
For since I've been from home, I have seen one or two,

Who were rul'd by their wives, and went in the rain,

Which shews wisdom and goodness, I think, very plain.

VOL. IV.

Not a maker of ballads in all this great town,

But is priming his piece to knock poor Chatham down;

Nay, the ladies that traffick in love round the Garden.

Drink his downfall in gin, to the very last farthing.

The news-papers all are as sly as they can be

With W——'s and P——'s and , I hope you understand me,

For my part (for I think 'tis a shame to stand out, And see a poor lord so belabour'd about)

As I find, upon trial, a knack to compose

A caustic in verse, ten times hotter than prose,
I'm resolv'd in some Chronicle soon to have at 'em,
Subscribing myself at the bottom Phil-Chatham,

I may do him much good, and one knows not for certain,

He may leave me a box, when he thinks of departing;

Or perhaps (which is more to be wish'd for by far) He may make me Jackall in his next German war.

I am, dear friend, yours fincerely.

[79]

PROPOSALS

FOR PRINTING BY SUBSCRIPTION

(Taken from Mr. Hogarth's famous picture of Mr. Garrick, in the character of Richard the Third)

THE PRINT OF A LATE COMMONER.

A SPECIMEN OF THE WORK.

THE late G—t C—— will be lying on his couch, dreffed with his coronet and robes, and his hands and feet wrapped up in flannel, and flarting at the ghofts that appear to him in his fleep, and address him in limitation of the ghofts in Shakespeare.

Enter the ghost of Sarah duchess of Marlborough.

The first was I that help'd thee to be known, But not the last that finds thee an apostate. In the debate, O think on Marlborough, And shrink in terror of thy guiltiness.

Enter the ghost of Robert earl of Orford.

When I was living, my fair character By thee was punched full of deadly holes;

Think

Think on the Tower and me, despair and die; The injur'd Orford bids thee droop and die.

Enter the ghost of Ralph Allen, esq;

Let me be laid within thy bosom, Ch—m,
And weigh thee down to ruin, shame and sorrow;
I thought thee once deserving of my friendship;
But now a convert made by truth and justice,
I join thy new pursuers, once thy friends:
If any pains can adequate thy crimes,
May they, thou arch impostor, now await thee.

Enter the ghost of Sir William Pynsent.

Let me fit heavy on thy foul to-morrow;
Pynsent that rais'd thy fortune—not thy same.
Think on my wronged heirs, who now with justice Curse the salse patriot in their humble state,
And join with me to execrate his baseness;
Let all their wrongs to-morrow be remember'd,
And sink thy edgeless tongue.

Chorus of English ghosts destroyed in Germany.

Awake, awake, inhuman murderer!
Think how we bled to raife thy once-lov'd name,
Which now, alas! lies bury'd in a title,
Bloody and guilty; guilty, now awake,
To future peers a terrible example.

The ghost of William earl of Bath.

Brother in guilt, remember me to-morrow;
Let not my fate o'erwhelm thy trembling foul!
I that was wasted to death by sulfome honours:
Poor Bath!
Unpitied and dishonour'd, now appear
To warn thee of the danger of to-morrow.
O think on me!

This print will be distributed gratis to the late G—t C——r's remaining friends in the common-council, as few copies will now serve that purpose.

Subscriptions to be taken in at Mr. Dingley's, at North-End, at alderman Beckford's in Soho-Square, and at the Peer's new friend, colonel W. Barré, vicatreasurer of Ireland.

THE KATS AND THE CHEESE!

IF bees a government maintain,
Why may not rats, of stronger brain
And greater pow'r, as well be thought
By Machiavelian axioms taught?
And so they are, for thus of late
It happen'd in the rats' free state.

Their prince (his subjects more to please) Had got a mighty Cheshire cheese, In which his ministers of state Might live in plenty, and grow great.

A pow'rful party strait combin'd,
And their united forces join'd,
To bring their measures into play,
For none so loyal were as they;
And none such patriots to support.
As well the country as the court,
No sooner were those dons admitted,
But (all those wond'rous virtues quitted).
Regardless of their prince, and those
They artfully led by the nose,
They all the speediest means devise.
To raise themselves and families.

Another party, well observing
These pamper'd were, while they were starving.
Their ministry brought in disgrace,
Expell'd them, and supply'd their place:
These on just principles were known
The true supporters of the throne,
And for the subject's liberty
They'd (marry would they) freely die;
But, being well six'd in their station,
Regardless of their prince and nation,
Just like the others, all their skill
Was how they might their paunches six.

On this, a rat not quite so blind In state-intrigues as human-kind, But of more honour, thus reply'd; Confound ye all on either side! All your contentions are but these, Whose arts shall best secure the cheese.

E PIGRAM

SAYS great William Pitt, with his usual emotion,
"The peers are no more than a drop in the ocean *."
The city adore him; how charming a thing!
To pull down the peers, and to humble the king;
But summon'd to court, he resects on his words,
And to balance the state, takes a seat with the lords.

A DIALOGUE BETWEEN RALPH AND HODGE.

RALFH.

ADzooks! master Hodge, you are wescome to town, How fares all our friends in the west? Is Cic'ly alive, and Thomas and Joan, And Marg'ry and Kate, and the rest?

. Vide the wisest speech he ever made.

E 4

RODOS

HODGE.

Aye, aye, they're all well, and desires their love,
And good wishes to you and to aunt;—
But I heates to be plagued with their nonsense above

All things, but this curfed long jaunt.

I longs for the news—Is 'fquire Wilkes come to town?

May we hope to be guided by Pitt?

We're hugely dismay'd to hear 'un run down—

Zouns; I thought the town-folks had more wit.

RALPH.

As to Wilkes, my old friend, he remains where he was;

And as to his friends—why plague rat 'em; But poor 'squire Pitt (all flesh is but grass) Lies decently bury'd in Chatham.

ON THE POLITICAL DEATH OF THE LATE GREAT COMMONER.

HIERE dead to fame lies patriot Will,
His monument his feat;
His titles are his epitaph,
His robe his winding sheet.

ON A LATE WHIMSICAL EVENT

THAT BEFEL SIR - AT THE CASTLE INN AT MARLBOROUGH,

IN THE MONTH OF FEB. 1767.

AT Marlbro' inn oblig'd to ftop My tir'd mare, and bait her; While eating of my mutton chop, I thus address'd the waiter:

Who's on my right? I hear a moan: -In state Sir Robert lying. Who's on my left? I hear a groan: -In state L- C- dying.

Then prithee tell me what's to pay, (Deuce take your introduction) For I no longer here will stay Between BEATH and DESTRUCTION.

ON MR. CHURCHILL'S DEATH.

Prose-driving dunces, waddling fools in thime, Scoundrels of ev'ry kind, by vengeance led, Spit forth your venom, poison all our clime, Churchill, who fcourg'd you to your holes, is J. C. dead!

致想现仍使

KUNGE BLADYDE To William Pitt, lendethe greetiynge.

ABUCH wond'rous goode dothe founte difpente,

More wond'rous farre bothe flowe thyne elsquence.

My springes may aide some pallyed lymb to free:

Thy mightier cure—must not compared be, Britannia's self restor'd—to libertye.

He kyndrede streams, D! keepe your wontede course:

Let ages probe your uncorrupted fource. Pay humble crutche bedecke poore Bladyde's fryne:

Britannia's hearté be offered uppe at thyne.

Bath, July 18, 1767.

SOME years ago there was printed the double-faced letter of cardinal Richlieu. An invention of the like kind is the Jesuits Double-faced Creed, which was published in the history of Popery, 1679, and which, according to the different readings, may suit either Papist or Protestant. 'Tis a true portrait of the followers fowers of Ignatius Loyola, and worthy a place in the New Foundling Hospital for Wit.

[87]

THE JESUITS DOUBLE-FACED CREED.

I hold for faith What England's church allows,
What Rome's church faith My conficience difavows.
Where the king is head The flock can take no fhame,
The flock's mided Who hold the Pope inpremes
Where the altar's dreft Who kerable's bread and wine.
He is an afs Who their communion flies,
Who fluns the mass Is catholic and wise.

EN LATIN.

Pro fide teneo fana
Affirmat quae Romana
Affirmat quae Romana
Videntur mihi vana,
Videntur mihi vana,
Videntur mihi vana,
Tum plebs eft fortunata,
Erraticus tum Grex, eft
Cum caput fiat papa,
Cum menia vino panis,
Afini nomen meruit
Miffam qui deferuit
Catholicus eft. & fapit.

MINTS FOR A POLITICAL PRINT.

WRITTEN IN NOVEMBER, 1767.

HIS Excellency the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland is faid to have a fingular turn for portrait painting, which he willingly employs in the fervice of his friends. He performs gratis, and feldom gives them the trouble of fitting for their pictures. But I believe the talents of this ingenious nobleman never had so fair an occasion of being employed to advantage as at present. It happens very fortunately for him, that he has now a fet of friends, who feem intended by nature for the subjects of such a pencil. In delineating their features to the public, he will have an equal opportunity of displaying the delicacy of his hand, and, upon which he chiefly piques himfelf, the benevolence of his heart. But confidering the importance of his present cares, I would fain endeavour to fave him the labour of the defign, in hopes that he will bestow a few moments more upon the execution. Yet I will not prefume to claim the merit of invention. The blindness of chance has done more for the painter than the warmest fancy could have imagined; and has brought together such a group of figures as I believe never appeared in real life, or upon canvas before.

6 had

Your principal character, my lord, is a young d—mounted upon a lofty phaeton; his head grows giddy; his horses carry him violently down a precipice; and a bloody carcase, the fatal emblem of Britannia, lies mangled under his wheels. By the side of this surious charioteer sits Caution without Foresight, a motley thing, half military, scarce civil. He too would guide; but, let who will drive, is determined to have a seat in the carriage. If it be possible, my lord, give him to us in the attitude of an oracter orator eating the end of a period, which may begin with, "I did not fay I would pledge myself"—The rest he eats.

Your next figure must bear the port and habit of a judge; the laws of England under his feet, and before his distorted vision, a dagger, which he calls the law of nature, and which marshals him the way to murder the c—st—n.

In such good company the respectable p— of the c----l cannot be omitted. A reasonable number of decrees must be piled up behind him, with the word REVERSED in capital letters upon each of them, and out of his decent lips a compliment à la Tilbury, "Hell and d—n blast you all!" N. B. It would not be amiss to give him the air of farting at the decrees above mentioned.

There is still a young man, my lord, who I think will make a capital figure in the piece. His features are too happily marked to be mistaken. A single line of his face will be sufficient to give us the heir apparent of Loyola, and all the college. "A little more "of the devil, my lord, if you please, about the "eyebrows; that's enough, a perfect Malagrida, "I protest!" So much for his person; and as for his mind, a blinking bull-dog placed near him will will form a very natural type of all his good qualities.

These are the figures, which are to come forward to the front of the piece. Your friendship for the——of——will naturally secure a corner in the retirement for him and his curtain. Provided you discover him on a bed, with a magic wand in his hand, any one of Aretine's postures will suit him; for if same be not too partial, there is certainly a bed, upon which he has exhibited with uncommon grace and activity in them all.

If there be still any vacancies in the canvas, you will easily sill them up with fixtures or still life. You may shew us half a paymaster for instance, with a paper stuck upon the globe of his eye, and a label out of his mouth, No, Sir, I'm of t'other side, Sir. How I lament that sounds cannot be conveyed to the eye!

You may give us a C——r in Ch—— and a $ — at W——feeming to pull at two ends of a rope, while a flip knot in the middle may really strangle three fourths of the army, or a lunatic brandishing a crutch, or bawling through a grate, or writing with desperate charcoal a letter to North America; or a Scotch secretary teaching the Irish people the true pronunciation of the English language. That barbarous people people are but litte accustomed to figures of oratory, so that you may represent him in any attitude you think proper, from that of Sir G—t E—down to Gov. J—ne. These however are but the slighter ornaments of composition, and so I leave them to the choice of your own luxurious fancy.

The back ground may be shadowed with the natural obscurity of Scotch clerks and Scotch secretaries, who may be itched out to the life with one hand grasping a pen, the other rivetted in their respective posteriors. Your southern writers are apt to rub their foreheads in the agony of composition; but with Scotchmen, the seat of inspiration lies in a lower place, which, while the suror is upon them, they lacerate without mercy. By this delectable friction, their imaginations become as prurient as their backsides, and the latter are relieved from one fort of matter, while their brains are supplied with another. Every thing they write in short is polished ad unguem.

But amidst all the licence of your wit, my Lord, I must intreat you to remember that there is one character too high, and too sacred even for the pencil of a peer, though your Lordship has formerly done business for the family. Besides, the attempt would be unnecessary. The true character of that great person person is engraven in the hearts of the Irish nation; and as to a false one, they need only take a survey of the person and manners of their chief governor, if, in the midst of their distresses, they can laugh at the persect caricatura of a K——.

CORREGGIO.

THE ANALOGY

BETWEEN LEGISLATION AND HORSE-RACING.

THE swist-pac'd hours convoke again
Our senate on Newmarket's plain;
They mind not here who's out, who's in—
Their contest is, who most shall win.
Here too they drop all party rage—
Far diff'rent heats their thoughts engage.

Once on the turf I'll boldly venture,
My Pegafus the lifts shall enter;
Jockies, his wings ye need not dread——
They're weighted by his rider's lead.

I've heard there is a near alliance 'Twixt ev'ry lib'ral art and science; So the same seatures we may trace in Both legislation and horse-racing.

Good:

Good laws require good heads to make 'em: And to do bets, to lay, or take 'em.

Laws are design'd to keep rogues under;
To save your house and purse from plunder.
And he whose noble genius aims
To shine at these Olympic games,
And cannot, with superior sleight,
Out-wit the knave, the biter bite,
Must leave the turs, or ever curse
The mis'ries of an empty purse.

I've heard it faid, our senate shou'd Enact their laws for gen'ral good; And therefore should have hearts that see! Most warmly for the common-weal. And who can doubt but they inherit This noble and exalted spirit, That can consign their thousands o'er To wretches they ne'er saw before? When too (to heighten their deserving) Their wives and samilies are starving?

Does not the faddle represent Taxes, clapt on by parliament? Nor has the nation shewn bad sport; We humbly thank their honours for't:

The

Tho' fome have made complaint of late,
Their backs were gall'd with over-weight;
And that their fides had forely felt
The whip and fpur full freely dealt;
Yet hope these patriot-jockies will
At length, to shew true sportsman's skill,
Pull in their steeds, quite out of breath,
Nor push the willing tits to death.

Proceed, ye two fold legislators.

Of horses and your fellow creatures;

Keep well your seats, nor vote, nor ride,
On post's or ministry's wrong side;
So shall the purse your pockets sill,
And grooms and statesmen praise your skill.

THE EARL OF NORTHINGTON'S TOAST,
ON THE SEVERAL CHANGES IN THE MINISTRY,
GIVEN IN 1766.

WHAT that rogue loses, this rogue wins;

Both are birds of a feather;

"Here's damn the Outs, and damn the Ins,

"And damn them all together."

THE OFFER OF A YOUNG MINISTER * TO THE PUBLIC,

IN THIS TIME OF NECESSITY.

SINCE the state is in want of some bold forward youth,

Who can guide with discretion, with spirit, and truth; With a view, my good people, our measures to mend, Permit me to point out my young hearty friend; He is resolute, easy, obedient, and clear, And I think, if I know him, he'll do for a year.

He's form'd cap-à-pié in the best modern way;
And—as long as he's pleas'd—is too true to betray;
His wit is so striking, he'll dare to engage
Great M—f—d the wonder and gem of the age;
So shrewd—that, if factions surround him, he'll trick 'em,

As ably as Rockingham, Grafton, or Wickham.

As Apelles selected from each Grecian face, To paint his fam'd Venus, some beauty or grace, So he, from each statesman who shines at this time, To make himself persect, has skim'd off the cream.

^{*} General Conway, when secretary of state in July 1765.

From B—e he learnt courage, intrigue from his brother,

And craft from 'em both; for they're shades to each other.

From Chatham he learnt to harangue and dispute
For American rights, ere he crept to Lord Bute:
From Camden's kind, liberal, generous soul,
To give the crown pow'r 'bove legal controul:
Lord Clare taught him friendship, Lord Sandya ready wit,

And Charles when to yield to the four and the bit.

With Holland he studied the passions of men,
And knows all their price from one hundred to ten.
All the arts of stock-jobbing each broker could bring,
He possesses, improv'd by Lord Hertford this spring;
And, to sum up this prodigy all in one line,
"My friend in political merit's a mine;"
A mine, that if work'd, large resources will yield,
To the court, to the senate, the council, and field;
As he sprung from the dirt, so in dirt he'll live on,
And will perish in sin—for the good of the c—n.
If these are not qualities worthy to rule,
Ye may take Bute and Holland, with all the Scotch school.

AN EPIGRAM WRITTEN EXTEMPORE.

ON READING A PARAGRAPH IMPORTING THE RE-TIREMENT OF A CERTAIN GREAT FAVOURITE.

As the Devil and B— were conversing of late, Of the Ins and the Outs, and the care of the state; I fancy, cry'd Satan, my worthy old friend, You and I shall go downward before we ascend: My honest colleague, reply'd B—, that's a shock, Ascend I can all-ways—(perhaps to the b—.) You know, answer'd Lucifer, long I've been true; But if party's too pow'rful, what can we do? Ken me reeht, says my Lord, it admits nae dispute, Aw the laddies in Scotland will screen Janny B—. You're a fool, answer'd Lucifer; balance the scales; Your own country detests you, Go—run into Wales.

POLLY CLARK.

ON THE KING,

DECLARING THAT HE WOULD HAVE NO MONEY

SPENT ON ELECTIONS,

BUT THAT "HE WOULD BE TRIED BY HIS COUNTRY."

TRY'D by your country! To your people's lowe, Amiable Prince, so soon appeal! Stay, till the tender sentiments improve, Ripening to gratitude from zeal.

Years

Years hence (yet ah! too foon) shall Britain fee The trial of thy virtues past; Who could foretell that your first wish would be, What all believe will be your last?

AN EPIGRAM.

WHEN Sampson, full of wrath, devis'd Vengeance on false Philistia's race,

Three hundred foxes scarce suffic'd

To blaze destruction o'er the place.

Three hundred, fays his Grace, and smiles;
Alas! in my administration
One single F— alone had wiles
Sufficient to destroy a nation.

EPIGRAM.

BY AN ETON BOY.

A S, on a board well-pois'd, boys fink and rife,
As scales, one falling, t'other upward flies,
The sons of Westminster and Eton school,
Hold, in affairs of state, divided rule.
† Pultney was down, and envying || Walpole's height,
Strove long, in vain, to rife above the knight.

† Bred at Westminster. # Bred at Eton.

The

The † Pelhams next rose up to high renown,
But cunningly they first pull'd Walpole down.
† Granville alost was, like a meteor seen,
He blaz'd one morn, and disappear'd at e'en.

|| Fox in his bold attempt was soon laid sprawling;
Just on his rise, he fell, for sear of falling.
Quick, † Hollis mounted, ever in a hurry,
And on the rising side up started † Murray.
That scale is sinking now: 'tis tit for tat:
Beware, ye Westminsters, of || Pitt and Pratt.

LINES

POSTED UP AT THE SUN-FIRE OFFICE IN CORNHILL, ON CLOSING THE POLL FOR THE CITY OF LONDON, MARCH, 1768.

DROOP not, my fon; thy laurels cannot fade, Tho' venal citizens deny thee aid.
On me, on me, their barb'rous rage they turn;
My rights they trample, and my altars spura.
I too must fall!—Too well, alas! I see
Bach shaft that wounds thy breast is aim'd at me.
Droop not, my son, nor ask a nobler sate
Than bravely salling with a falling state.
Thou didst not fall, till worth, till honour sed;
Thou didst not fall, till freedom's self was dead.

Bred at Westminster. | Bred at Eton. BALLAD

BALLAD

ON THE GENERAL ELECTION,

1768.

HAIL, glorious time,
(Fit subject for rhyme)
'That ev'ry distinction can level;
When the gentleman greets
Each blackguard he meets,
And pride must descend to be civil.

The elegant peer
Must guzzle strong beer
With freemen, to gain their protection;
And all who aspire
To be knights of the shire,
Get drunk to secure their election.

How fervent the zeal
That candidates feel!
The friendship they vow how fincere!
But 'tis easy to guess,
When such zeal they profess,
That the time of election draws near.

[101]

By flatt'ring and treating
At every meeting,
With the voters they try to prevail:
No words can describe
How they promise and bribe;
Such eloquence never can fail.

A POLITICAL GENEALOGY.

ARBITRARY power begot oppression;
Oppression begot tumult;
Tumult begot revenge;
Revenge begot murder;
Murder begot thanks;
Thanks begot perjury;
And perjury begot acquittal.

Sic transit gloria mundi.

DIRECTIONS

- TO THE HERALDS

POR NEW PAINTING THE CITY ARMS.

*OuT with that cross from London's shield,
*Twill Harley's year not suit:
*Out with the sword! and for them paint
The petticoat and boot.

Nor

Nor watchful of fo vile a charge, Let dragons spread the wing; But, like the rescu'd boot, by posts Supported let it swing.

Swing, as himself deserves; and oh!

To gain him like reward,

Still let the good old motto prompt,

Direct us, Gracious Lord +.

THE CAMPAIGN, 1768. BY CAPT. T-----

FIAT Justitia, Ruat Cœlum,
We'll maul the rogues if we can fell 'em.
Justitia Fiat, Cœlum Ruat,
Be sure the gun you level true at.
Cœlum, Justitia, Ruat, Fiat,
And shoot the man I cock my eye at.
Justitia, Fiat, Ruat, Cœlum,
Obey the words of Justice Gillam,
And if the rascals halloo—kill 'em.

+ DOMINE DIRIGE NOS. The Latin motto to the city arms.

THE FOLLOWING IS THE INSCRIPTION

ON THE TOMB-STONE OF MARSHAL THOMAS.

UNDER this stone lies Marshal Thomas!
"Tis very well;
We thank thee, Hell,
For taking such a rascal from us.

TO THE EDITOR.

THE following is the most exact copy I could procure of the Latin inscription upon the column intended very soon to be erested in the contre of the area, before a very grand house, now building on a pleasant spot not far from town. It is supposed to have been written by the celebrated Mons. de Bougainville, professor in the Academy of Inscriptions and Belles Lettres at Paris, the same who writ the Latin epitaph on the marble monument, sent over to Quebec, for the Baron de Dieskau.

In Memoriam

Nob. Dom. Vice Com. H
In hâc viciniâ olim defuncti
Ob dimidiam rei familiaris partem
fibi legatam,
(Uxore et fratris filio defuncti nobilis etiam fuperstitibus)

F z

[104]

Et nullam aliam ob gratiam de illo bene merenti.

Nisi quòd ægroto in extrema valetudine affidue affuit,

Atque in ipsius mortis articulo
Testamentum supremum
composuit,

Ædificium hoc ex lateribus constructum, Viatorum admiratio,

Vicinorum invidia, Ut monumentum fidelis amicitiæ

Et domicilium fibimet ipfi accommodatum, A possessore præsenti,

Attornato artis suæ haud imperito, Extremâ licet senectute, Erigitur.

Idus Jul. An. Sal. 1768.

Accede, viator, contemplare, et si poteris, imitare.

70 A

CERTAIN MAGISTARTE (RIGHT HON, T. HARLEY)
ON THE DEDICATION OF A TOWER TO HIM

IN THE ISLE OF THANET.

CURS'D by the friends of liberty restor'd, By Tories prais'd, by Jacobites ador'd; What else remain'd to stigmatize thy cause? Nought—but expiring H—d's last applause.

INSCRIP-

INSCRIPTION FOR THE VILLA OF A DECAYED STATESMAN ON THE SEA-COAST.

BY MR. GRAY ..

OLD and abandon'd by each venal friend, Here Holland form'd the pious resolution, To smuggle some sew years, and strive to mend A broken character, and constitution.

On this congenial spot he fix'd his choice,
(Earl Goodwin trembled for his neighb'ring fand)
Here sea-gulls scream, and cormorants rejoice,
And mariners, tho' shipwreck'd, dread to land.

Here reigns the bluff'ring North, and blighting East;
No tree is heard to whisper, bird to sing;
Yet nature cannot surnish out the seast:
Art he invokes new horrors still to bring.

Now mould'ring fanes and battlements arife, Arches, and turrets nodding to their fall; Unpeopled palaces delude his eyes, And mimic defolation covers all:

- "Ah! (said the sighing peer) had Be been true,
 "Nor Shelburne's, Calcraft's, Rigby's friendship vain,
- "Far other scenes than these had crown'd our view,
 And realiz'd the ruins that we feign.
 - Not printed in his works.

" Purg'd by the fword, and beautify'd by fire

!

- " Then had we feen proud London's hated walls;
- " Owls might have hooted in St. Peter's choir,
 - " And Foxes stunk, and litter'd in St. Paul's".

JEMMY TWITCHER, OR THE CAMBRIDGE COURTSHIP.

BY THE SAME.

WHEN fly Jemmy Twitcher had smugg'd up his face,

With a lick of court white-wash, and pious grimace, A wooing he went, where three sisters of old In harmles society guttle and scold.

Lord! fifter, fays Physic to Law, I declare,
Such a sheep-biting look, such a pick-pocket air!
Not I for the Indies!—You know I'm no prude—
But his name is a shame—and his eyes are so lewd!
Then he shambles and straddles so oddly—I sear—
No—at our time of life 'twould be filly, my lear.

I don't know, fays Law, but methinks for his look,
'Tis just like the picture in Roghester's book;
'Then his character, Phizzy—his morals—his life—
When she died, I can't tell—he once had a wife:—
They say he's no Christian, loves drinking and whoring,

And all the town rings of his swearing and roaring,
And

[107]

And filching and lying, and Newgate-bird tricks;—Not I; for a coronet, chariot and fix.

Divinity heard, between waking and dozing,
Her sisters denying, and Jemmy proposing:
From table she rose, and with bumper in hand,
She stroked up her belly, and stroked down her band—
What a pother is here about wenching and roaring!
Why David loved catches, and Solomon whoring:
Did not Israel silch from the Egyptians of old,
Their jewels of silver and jewels of gold?
The prophet of Bethel, we read, told a lye;
He drinks—so did Noah;—he swears—so do L:
To reject him for suc', eccadillos were odd;
Besides, he repents—for he talks about God—

[To Jemmy]

Never hang down your head, you poor penitent elf, Come bus me—I'll be Mrs. Twitcher myself.

IMITATION. ANACR. OD. 46.

TO J. W. ESQ.

WOULD you wish to serve the state,
Would you strive with honours due,
That a court confess you great,
You, my friend, wrong schemes pursue.

F 4

Wildom

Wisdom that I know is your's, Brightest talents too you boast; But where gold extends its curse, All intrinsic merit's lost.

'Tis the quantum that you pay,
For the corporation bought:
'Tis how ductile you obey,
By the grand dictator taught *.

Curs'd be he, the wretch of yore,
Who, from womb of parent earth,
First produc'd the tempting ore,
Poison to all moral worth!

This domestic peace destroys,
This dissolves all human ties;
Urg'd by this, a brother's joys
Are a brother's facrifice.

This, where in the raptur'd foul Love should boast his purest fire,

Does each gen'rous thought controul,

Bids profession's vow expire.

 Cet admirable maitre des muets, quand il leur donne ses premieres leçons, forme avec ses mains dans leurs organes la disposition qui est necessaire pour prononcer chaque lettre.

LAMT.

This (and let bold honour mourn, Hearing the recorded tale)
This bade P— a villain turn,
This confines a Wilkes in jail.

Newport, Isle of Wight, Sept. 12.

EPISTLE

TO JOHN WILKES, ESQ. IN CONFINEMENT-

WHILE ev'ry truly English breast
Swells with regret and rage possess'd,
And mourns, O Wilkes, thy doom!
I rather joy, who hope to view
Thy steady soul her plan pursue,
And equal ancient Rome.

See M—d, impotent of foul,
In pale and filent malice fcowl,
And yield to Y—s the blow!
Vain all their rage! thy noble heart
Invulnerable fcorns the dart,
Nor heeds the feeble foe.

Thus faithful to his country's good; Unmov'd the menac'd Roman stood.

[110]

At all the Punic rage;
Bravely he met the death he dar'd,
Nor fear'd the cruel pains prepar'd,
Their malice to affuage.

Nor less the malice of thy foes
I deem, O man of many woes!
And much-enduring mind!
Nor less shall be thy fame: I see
Thy rescu'd country smile on thee,
And glory gleam behind,

But should a venal senate sear
To check oppression's proud causer,
Nor vindicate thy wrong,
Let hope, with conscience to attend,
Be thy inseparable friend,
And speed the hours along.

Then let no pensive thought be thine,
Nor let thy patriot heart repine,
But be these things thy sport;
For know—that time shall set thee free,
Unthank'd relentless m——y,
Unthank'd a thoughtless court.

Oxford, June 30, 1768.

[111]

THE WHOLE PRESENT DISPUTE

IN LAW AND POLITICS.

To contradict Wilkes, now M—— replies,
Twixt Tenor and Purport no difference lies:
They both in one meaning appear to entwine,
Like tendrils that twist round the stem of a vine,
Tho' the one suits your purpose, the other suits mine.

To M—— cries Wilkes, I pray you, my lord, Give its own honest meaning to each proper word: Suppose you should make a proposal to B.—, To bring in his C-— (tho' we hope he can't do't) The Purport means only, his kinsman to bring Thro' Scotland to England, and here make him k-—:: But the Tenor implies, and with very good reason, The unmaking another; and that's, you know, treason.

THE LIGH IN THE TOILS,
A POLITICAL PARER. BY MR. KENRICK

Ex ungue leonem.

Committed by the hand of power To close confinement in the Tower, Where many a dangerous beast we know Is lodg'd for royal raree-show;

F 6

A lion,

A lion, in a leopard's skin, His spots without, his heart within, Held forth to privilege his paw, And ckaim'd protection of the law.

Alarm'd, the forest stare awhile!
The assess bray! the foxes smile!
And tygers tam'd, untry'd, condemn.
Their brother brute too wild for them.
The sages of the law consult
The nature of his crimes occult,
While, wavering 'twixt the wrong and right,
They let him loose, and hope his slight;
'Till, basely hurt in bloody fray,
To distant lands he's lur'd away.

Let justice bring him now to shame:
The absent ever are to blame.
Accus'd he stands of horrid crimes,
Strange to these loyal, pious times!
Against his king---a bishop nods--Nay, more, he scratch'd against the gods.
Behold the impious traitor's claw,
Known, and obnoxious to the law.

The lion heard, and, with disdain, Returning to his native plain,

Demands

Demands the records just and true,
The fine and punishment his due.
Appall'd deluded justice stands,
Her balance ttrembling in her hands,
Nor holds uprais'd th' avenging blade
Without the rancorous lynx's aid.

Again the snare of power is spread, Inclosing his devoted head;
Again is urg'd the shame and sin.
Of spots upon a leopard's skin;
When lo! he casts his wanton spoils,
And proves a lion in the toils.

HARRY AND NAW.

WRITTEN IN 1768.

AN ELEGY, IN THE MANNER OF TIBULLUS.

ľ.

CAN Apollo resist, or a poet resuse, When Harry and Nancy solicit the Muse? A statesman, who makes the whole nation his care, And a nymph, who is almost as chaste as she's fair.

TF.

Dear sponsy had led such a damnable life, He determin'd to keep any whore but his wife: So Harry's affairs, like those of the state, Have been pretty well handled and tickled of late.

From

[114]

III.

From fourteen to forty our provident Nam-Had devoted her life to the study of man; And thought it a natural change of her station, From riding St. George, to ride over a nation.

IV.

Secret service had wasted the national wealth,
But now——'tis the price of the minister's health:
An expence which the treasury well may afford;
She who serves him in bed, should be paid at the board.

v.

So lucky was Harry, that nothing could mend His choice of a mistress, but that of a friend; A friend so obliging, and yet so sincere, With pleasure in one eye, in tother a tear?

VI.

My friend holds the candle—the lovers debate,
And among them, God knows how they fettle the flate;

Was there ever a nation so govern'd before, By a jockey and gambler, a p-p and a wh---? on the d. of Bedford's arrival in Ireland. 1768.

I.

SOFTLY sweet in Lydian measure, Let the flute resound our pleasure; Stop the noise of rattling drums: For the Great PRACE-MAKER comes.

II.

Let no din of frightful war With dread alarms his fancy scare; Nor let the thandring cannons roar, To speak his welcome to the shore.

III.

You vile, you venal, flavish band, In useless pageantry that fland, Begone! he likes not your parade; He hates a martial cavalcade.

IV.

But let the gently lulling lute In mildest strains the chief salute: And let the thrum of light guittar With grateful trisling please his ear. v.

Ye matrons, twine the olive wreath, Whose valiant friends thro' him still breathe: Ye maids, who have not lost a spouse, Adorn with thistle ev'ry house.

VI.

Ye ladies fair, shew your regards,
And strew the streets with heaps of cards;
Be Pam with glad amazement dumb;
His servant and his patron's come.

VII.

Ye fons of ALMA, tune your lays, And fing your worthy fav'rite's praise; Extol the heroes of his name, Whose valour won immortal fame.

VIII.

Chiefs, who the sword for freedom drew,, Alike to prince and people true; Nor barter'd shame for sordid pelf;. Nor made the public yield to self.

IX.

Last in the glorious record be The MARTYR for sweet LIBERTY; Who for religion nobly bled, And for his virtue lost his head. X.

In these bright patterns of renown, Trace worth continual handed down; Then say, what virtue of a man Adorns this worth?—if you can.

XI.

Describe his dangers on the main, Or on the great NEWMARKET plain; His wounds of honour in the face, Or stripes his back got at a race.

XII.

Display, to the admiring nations, His wond'rous skill in negotiations: Or, what more near engage his heart, The tricks of the stock-jobbing art.

XIII.

The losses tell, which haughty Spain Sorely lamented once in vain: Soon he with gen'rous ease restor'd The earnings of the British sword.

XIV.

Describe the fall of Gallic pride,
Her arms o'erthrown on ev'ry side;
And, that so high her cress's now rais'd,
Be this great DUKE by hirelings grais'd.
Ireland, Sept. 6, 1768.

1 118]

THE MIDDLESEX ELECTION.

A BALLAD ON THE SAME OCCASION; TO THE TUNE OF CHEVY CHASE.

GOD prosper long our noble king, And eke his subjects too; And grant such deeds as now I sing We never more may rue.

In feventeen hundred fixty-eight,
All on a fummer's day,
Grim death did on our member wait,
And took him clean away.

O! then a writ was issu'd out, To chuse a member in: And soon began a mighty rout For Proctor and for Glynn.

When as the day advanced nigh,
Each party did its beff;
And Horne (who fcorns to tell a lye)
Turn'd Proctor's cause to jest.

Some worthy wights, the Lord knows who,
Of Irith strength assurad,
Provided many a gallant crew,
True men, I'll pawn my word.

Such

Such crowds to Brentford town did hie,
As fill'd the place outright;
While thousands knew not where to lie,
And so—sat up all night.

At length the fatal morning came,
O had it ne'er arriv'd!
For many a wight crawl'd home quite lame,
Full glad that he furviv'd.

Soon as the rising sun had clear'd

The gloomy shades of night,
All on the hushings they appear'd—
O! 'twas a glorious fight!

With ribbon and with flar beforead, (Given by the good old king) Sir William hung his languid head, And look'd—like any thing.

The ferjeant held his head exciple,

For confcious failt was he,

That those who do the deed that's right,

Have real cause for give.

Mr. O'Merphy no was these, Hight consector at law— His bus'ness was to first and face, And find or make a fine.

Count

Count Gambler look'd as who should say,
"I'll bet ye six to one
"That Beauchamp Proctor gets the day:"
"I take it, damme."—"Done."

Whilst bustling still from place to place, Old Brentford's priest was seen, Who for this meal said many a grace, And servent pray'r, I ween.

And fill to heighten all they could This mighty gallant show, Close by the hustings numbers stood, Like—foldiers all a-row.

The clock told two, up flew the hat,
(A fignal for each wounder)
And foon the freeholders lay flat
As ever lay a flounder.

Then eyes and sculls, and arms and legs, Were darken'd, fractur'd, broke; And those who could not keep their pegs, Fell down—to mend the joke.

And many a ribbon flew about,
(For favours then were common)
And hundreds of the rabble rout
Were dizen'd out like yeomen.

What

What they did more, let other bards
In other guise declare;
For, truth to say, they play'd their cards,
To make all England stare.

Now God preserve our noble king, And grant henceforth, for aye, No suture poet e'er may sing The deeds of such a day!

ON THE INVESTITURE OF CARDINAL DE BERNIS, WITH A BLUE RIBBON AT VERSAILLES.

PUBLISHED A FEW MONTHS AFTER THE INSTALLATION OF THE EARL OF BUTE AT WINDSOR.

THE exaltation of De Bernis, who was naturally of a very amorous confliction, and feemed to have no other recommendation than his person, and art to please the fair sex, provoked the nobility and gentry beyond all moderation: so that when he was invested with the order of the Holy Ghost, in the chapel of Versailles, there was, during the ceremony, a scroll of paper thrown out of the gallery among the knights, on which was wrote a French parody on the hymn called Veni Creator, and is thus translated:

Thou

Thou holy spirit, power divine,
Do thou for France's glory deign
On this new minister to shine,
And lighten up his clouded brain.

Of twelve unlearn'd thou heretofore Didst raise up miracles to thee; Renew those miracles once more, By giving sense to poor Bernis.

His bosom with thy slames posses;
On him the love of heaven pour,
That he may kis the ladies less,
And least of all——La Pompadour.

Bernis, invested with the rank of a minister, and decked out with a blue ribbon, could not, doubt-less, but appear more agreeable in the eyes of his protectress; and she, never easy, day and night, out of his company, looked upon his athletic constitution, and consummate knowledge in the art of love, to be such superior talents, as made him extremely capable of unravelling the most knotty, and conducting the most arduous affairs of state; imagining with great reason, that in the course of an administration, which she alone had put into his hands, he would certainly take no step without sirst consulting her.

EPI-

[125]

EPIGRAM

O BUTE! If, inflered of concerner, and of adiana,
You'd with to obtain extremial chargain.
From your breast up your gallet manader the nume firing,
Our hearts are all yours at the very fast lawing.

ODE TO COLOSIL L

Quis novus his nathri isanific fullus haips? Quo lefe ore fessus i quan inci pullus it sense!

OTHOU, whom adverte fate comme.
To rivet fate Britannia's chair.,
And bend her to communi;
Firm as Alcides the thou final,
The curies of an injur'd land.
Shall shake thy guilty soul.

The high enroll of ity name appears
With hireling Communers and poors,
Carr'd guardians of a throne.

The jockey Grafiam, wine car. space it.
In Britain's sensee or Newmans.

Adopt thee for his own:

Yet spite of all the venal tribe,
Tho' M-d plead, or H-d heibt,

Bwit:

Swift vengeance shall pursue;
Tho' blundering N-rt-n act his part
With Henley's * head, and Ryder's heart,
—Fit advocate for you.

With fuch abettors of his pride,
Gods! what had G—ft—n left untry'd,
Posses'd of such a tool!
But heav'n, in pity to mankind,
That Fl—tch—r for a knave design'd,
Foredoom'd him to a fool.

Say, then, bepowder'd and becurl'd,
The jest, the play-thing of the world,
An officer, a beau!
Safe in the general contempt,
What evil genius thee could tempt
To rise thy country's foe!

O flender youth, fo nice and trim,
So neat in feature and in limb,
With wreathed roses crown'd,
What easy maid with fandy locks,
Receives thy vows, thy love, thy p——
Or is miss——— sound?

Orator Henley.

[125]

Far other arts, far other charms,

Than lur'd the fair one to thy arms,

Thy dangers will require;

When patriot Glynn's learn'd voice shall rouse,

Or B—rke's loud thunder through the house,

With all the British fire:

Then shalt thou wish, but wish in vain,
Thou ne'er hadst lest dull Oxford's plain,
To seek a warmer sun;
Thy courage there might daunt a prostor,
Thy wit and genius dupe a doctor,
Or bilk a brawling dun.

So when black louring clouds deform
The angry skies, to meet the storm
A butterfly may foar——
But baffled soon, at random hurl'd,
His gilded wings in vain unfurl'd,
He falls to rise no more.

Will B—df—d, doom'd to drudge thro' life,
Slave to his avarice and wife,
For thee his hoards dispense?
Or R—gby, by his back and fist
Advanc'd in black corruption's lift,
Engage in thy defence?

With double weight of brass and lead,
Tho' vet'ran Bullface shake his head,
And sweat to earn his see,
Each slower of Billingsgate his boast:
—He cannot reason, well thou know's,
But he shall roar for thee.

With pedant scoul and fretful look,

Now Bl—cks—e talks without his book,

Now Th—rl—e croaks his wrath;

As wise, if not so loud as N—s,

Bewilder'd M—rt—n spits and stares—

All petulance and froth.

Say, fluent D—nning, classic Y—ke,
Dare ye refuse the dirty work,
And hope ye still to rise?
Alas! not less your filence stung
Their cause, than W—rb—rn's bold tongue
Confronting all their lyes.

But trust not thou the brazen lungs
Of lawyers, placemen's oily tongues—
Nor Mungo's journals quote;
Tho' Cl—re in tinsel rhet'ric shine
And sophists all their webs refine,
To guard a lying vote.

[127]

Lo! W—ym—th, B—rr—gt—n combine
To mark the way that must be thine,
The blood-stain'd path to power—
Thou too shalt soon in thunder speak,
And all pale G—st—n's vengeance wreak
In one devoted hour.

While many an Allen's fall shall grace
Thy triumphs in the glorious chace,
Till Britain, gag'd and chain'd,
Her idle charters thrown aside—
Admit the sword her laws to guide,
As when a Stuart reign'd.

Avert, kind heav'n! the black presage,
Nor let us see a Charles's age,
In all its woes renew'd!
—Full oft at Freedom's holy shrine
Have Britain's sons with zeal divine
Libations made in blood.

Yet if the rights our fires enjoy'd
From thy free gift, must be destroy'd,
And freedom quit our shore—
On him that asks in bonds to live,
And dares his country's fall survive,
All thy red vengeance pour.

DARGO.

Thou holy spirit, power divine,
Do thou for France's glory deign
On this new minister to shine,
And lighten up his clouded brain.

Of twelve unlearn'd thou heretofore Didst raise up miracles to thee; Renew those miracles once more, By giving sense to poor Bernis.

His bosom with thy slames posses;
On him the love of heaven pour,
That he may kiss the ladies less,
And least of all—La Pompadour.

Bernis, invested with the rank of a minister, and decked out with a blue ribbon, could not, doubt-less, but appear more agreeable in the eyes of his protectress; and she, never easy, day and night, out of his company, looked upon his athletic constitution, and confummate knowledge in the art of love, to be such superior talents, as made him extremely capable of unravelling the most knotty, and conducting the most arduous affairs of state; imagining with great reason, that in the course of an administration, which she alone had put into his hands, he would certainly take no step without sirst consulting her.

EPI-

[129]

That steals and pilfers all he can, Tho' on a widely different plan-

Unless they'll add a triffe more, It is not worth his while to pore: His present salary scarce produces Him spectacles for private uses: And if wit fail, or sight grow dim, A spectacle they'd make of him: Therefore, the sovereign balm to cuse Decay of sight's—a sinecure!

Whatever comes within his grapple, He'll pocket--- as one would an apple."
It matters not, peerage or pension, To either he has vast pretension, But, with submission, would much rather Kis hands for both of them together.

No doubt they'll fit with ease and grace, Happily form'd in cast of face That ne'er knew blush—except in th' dark, Or higher foar'd than to be clerk, A clerk i'th' office where he now Makes better men with homage bow.

[130]

THE STATE-COACH.

A TALE.

IN IMITATION OF THE MANNER OF DR. SWIFT.

ONCE on a time a grand lord-may'r (No matter when, no matter where) Kept a huge pompous coach of state, Of most enormous bulk and weight; And on the times of public joy, To wheel about the pond'rous toy, He kept besides a noble string Of horses, fit to draw a king; All of high blood, all beafts of breeding, But vicious from excess of feeding; Of course intractable and heady, Yet in one point perversely steady, Viz. each good steed was true and hearty To his own interest and his party; Nay, this curs'd spirit hast possest To fuch degree each sturdy beast, That not a fingle chuff would move From threats or foothing, fear or love, Unless in partnership he drew With those of his confed'rate crew, Though thus the clumfy and the clever, Ill-pair'd oft hobbled on together.

Hence

Hence when the coach was order'd out. Buck would refuse to match with Stout, At least one inch would not proceed Unless impetuous Di'mond led, Who when of late our grand premier, And then uncheck'd in his career, While he tugg'd on the vast machine O'er rough and fmooth, through thick and thin, Would often with their rapid turn Make the wheels creak and axle burn: Yet give the haughty devil his due, Though bold his quarterings, they were true: Yes, let us not his skill disparage, He never once o'erset the carriage, Though oft he whirl'd it, one would think, Just o'er the pitfall's headlong brink; While at each hair-breadth 'scape, his foes Would cry, there, there, by G-d, it goes! And as stiff Buck would ne'er submit But on these terms to champ the bit. Stout in return was full as fullen, Nor the same harness would he pull in. Unless by cautious Duke preceded. Or by pacific Sawney headed: The body-coachman, hence unable To rule the refractory stable, Was forc'd to leave the faucy brutes To terminate their own disputes:

And

And when they deign'd to wear the traces, Chuse their own partners and their places; But, tir'd themselves with these distractions, Resolv'd at last the several factions (For in their anger all had wit) Some terms of union to admit, Which, that more sirmly they might bind, Drawn in this form by all were sign'd:

We the contracting steeds, (exprest Here was the name of each prime beaft, As Di'mond, Sawney, Duke) however Determin'd not to work together, Yet by these presents are agreed Together peaceably to feed: On this account them (work or play) Let each receive his 'custom'd pay: Confirm we by concurring votes To each his daily peck of oats: Befides, omit we by no means Proportion'd quantities of beans; Nor yet warm mashes when we chuse 'em, Nor Bracken's balls when pleas'd to use 'em; For as 'tis likely from full feeding, At times, diseases may be breeding, 'Tis right for ev'ry horse that is fick, Who finds the food should find the physic.

Thefe

These previous articles now clos'd,
Here prudent Di'mond interpos'd,
Long fam'd for his contempt of pels,
And views which center'd not in sels,
"How chang'd at present!" (or no more Wears he that mask which once he wore.)
Quoth he, (wrapp'd round with many a clout
His greasy heels, the horses gout)

- "Snug now ourselves and our dependants,
- " Shall we neglect our dear descendants?
- " Nay e'en from scripture we should learn
- " For our own housholds due concern;
- " Lest we incur then, to our shame,
- " Of infidels th' accurled name.
- " Provide we next (if such your will is)
- " For all our present colts and fillies;
- " No matter, the for this supply
- "We drain our master's coffers dry:
- " Stretch we the grant too, if ye please,
- " E'en to the future colts of these;
- "Then to their coltlings in entail,
- " Till issue of such issue fail:
- "Well, bullies, are you all content?"
 Each fleed here fnorted his affent;
 And, more t'express their joy of heart,
 All let at once th'obstreperous f--t;
 The mews, thro' all its spacious round,
 Re-echo'd to th'unmanner'd sound;

And

And now adjusted their pretentions,
And thus secur'd their long-breath'd pensions,
Like porkers fattening in the sty,
On their fat rumps at ease they lie;
Uplitter'd to their ears in straw,
Yet not a single beast will draw.

Dogs! to reduce you all to reason, I wish, at least, for some short season, That in your present master's stead, Too meek to tame fo rough a breed, ' Too mild to curb your factious spirit, Too good to treat ye as ye merit, Stern boisterous Cromwell from the dead, Or bluff old Hall would lift his head, That I might see you bound and skip Beneath their disciplining whip; That I might see your pamper'd hides Flogg'd, 'till from out your furrow'd fides Spun, in each part, the fizy blood, Too rich from floth and copious food; That thus let out at all these sluices, It may purge off its vicious juices; While I should hear you, at each jerk, Cry, Lash no more, we'll work, we'll work.

[135 1

EPIGRAM.

OF Outs and Ins, the common fins
Are public peculation;
Ins have been Outs, and Outs been Ins,
And both have robb'd the nation.

Since both alike one plan pursue,
Of mal-administration,
Of each fort raise a chosen few
To an exalted station.

My views are far from finisher

To work a reformation;

I'd make Jack Ketch prime minisher

Of each man's elevation.

ON THE OUTS AND INS.

THE Outs much like an empty stomach are,
That frets and keeps a coil for diet;
The Ins, to one that's full you may compare,
Which well contented is and quiet.
A vessel full, when struck, makes no replies,
But th' empty barrel always makes a noise:
Thus he that's in no 'ccasion has to quarrel;
But he that's out, is like an empty barrel.

[r36]

A CHARACTER.

OF vice the fecret friend, the foe profess d. Of every talent to deceive posses'd; As mean in houshold favings, as profuse In vile corruption's scandalous abuse; Mentally blind, on whom no ray of truth E'er glanc'd auspicious, e'en in bloom of youth; Perfidious, arbitrary, proud and base, With all the fins that damn'd the Stuart race: Without one virtue to fecure from hame The flatt'ring promise of an early fame: Thou tinsel pageant of a summer day! But winter stern shall tear thy mask away; Shall drag at once into abhorred light A heart best hid beneath the veil of night. Nought will avail thy filly, simpering smile, No artifice can his rough hand beguile; One general indignation will be shewn; Contempt, at last, is into hatred grown. What, tho' inimitable Churchill's hearse Sav'd thee from all the vengeance of his verse, Macaulay shall in nervous profe relate Whence flows the venom that diffracts the flate. Thy name will flink in hist'ry's awful page, Curs'd by thy native land from age to age:-Sure, as that fack-inspired Whitehead sings, And Scotch addressers hail the-best of kings.

Allen's Ghost. THE

[537]

THE ANSWER.

Risum teneatis amici?

TO hear your complaints I shall ever be ready, And not to redress them I swear I am steady. It gives me concern that you come here missed: Your Remonstrance, I hold, is not over well-bred. To arraign my Mama, and my Minion, must be Disrespectful at least both to them and to me; Besides 'tis injurious, tho' true, to be told That my P——t's bought, that the people are fold; For of places and pensions a monstrous profusion Is plac'd in my hands by our wife constitution.

In spite of my modesty too I must raise,
Since you will not do it, my own song of praise.
The law of the land to respect is my glory!
And as I was born and bred a staunch Tory,
If you dare to insult or trisse with law,
Like Nero, by M*S I'll keep you in awe.
I scorn to encroach on the one house or t'other;
I only c them; then why such a pother?
Too well I remember the oath that I made,
The best of K—gs never your rights will invade;
From a beggarly spot we were call'd, and we came
Those rights to defend; then may I not claim,
Since the tyt to play I so seldom endeavour,
That the cry of my people should be G—e for ever?
Then

[138]

Then laughing he publish'd this gracious command: Instead of my a--se let them all kiss my hand.

A CONVERSATION

BETWEEN THE TWO HEADS UPON TEMPLE-BAR; ON OCCASION OF THE MERCHANTS ADDRESS, MARCH 1769.

SAYS Townley to Fletcher, What causes this rout!

Pray what are the people of London about?

Such noise I ne'er heard — 'tis a shame and disgrace——

No man can be easy or safe in his place.

I'll tell you, says Fletcher, if rightly I guess,

The merchants are met with their loyal address;

My eyes are not clear, you may fairly suppose;

But it smells pretty strong—I can trust to my nose.——

Quoth Townley, Gude troth, tho' my eyes are but dim,

You are certainly right, for there's Eddy B—m; And, as I'm alive, there's our favourite Charley, And asomen, and mule-men, and W—s, and H—l—y.

- "What! H--l-y, that liv'd in the city's great house,
- " Who made all the mob once as still as a mouse?"

[139]

- " Yes, H--l-y, the man —— (good lord, how the
- "The man that seiz'd petticoat, gibbot, and boot."
- But who's he before, on the woundy fine horse?
- "He's as stiff as his majesty at Charing-cross."
- "Why he, Sir, though stately, and blust'ring in look,
- "Strip off his fine gear, and he's only a-Cook."
- "And who are all those, whom the mob treat un"civil?
- * Why Dutchmen, and Scotchmen, and Jews—and the devil."
- " Jews, Dutchmen, and Scotchmen, present an ad" dress?"
- 4c Yes."—The devil was right, then—he could do no less.
- An address in these times! —— it is much, very .

 much——
- An English address carry'd up by the Dutch!——
 'Tis nat'ral for Scotchmen, I know, to rebel;
- To be loyal —— 'tis strange! —— but 'tis all very well——

This incense of brimstone some noses may suit; Tho' Britons dislike it, it likes my Lord B--e. The Macs have all steadily join'd in the work, All the Macs in the city, excepting Mac Quirk----

[340]

But see how the mob there are breaking their pates-

"Tis time that we flop them, so fant up the gates; For if they go on with addresses and letters.

We must shortly resign——and make room for our betters.

TEMPLE-BAR.

A DIALOGUE

AT ST. JAMES'S GATE, ON THE SAME OCCASION, BETWEEN A NOBLE LORD AND THE MOB.

LORD.

OH! Englishmen, Englishmen, can't you be quiet?

. For your wives and your children's fake, do not riot;

The duty I owe to my k--- and to you,
Makes me beg youll differe, left the cause you cits.

should rue.
You've insulted the crown; and for these honesk

You've fear'd the poor gentlemen out of their wits.

When

When they muster'd at 'Change, they were decent and clean;

But are now so bedaub'd, they're not fit to be feen.

I am fent by the k—— to intreat you'll disperse;

And hark ye, you fellow there, drive off that hearse.

If you don't go away, all the guards will be feat; 'Tis a desperate step, and I dread the event.

I suppose you're set on by some rascal or other, And have had money giv'n you to make all this pother.

M Q B.

The cause by your lordship is salidly ascalb'd,
For the' we are poor, yet we scom to be brib'd;
Beside we declare, were we ever so willing,
We don't know a man who would give us a shilling.

LORD.

New I vow and declare, though I hate all this strife,

Yet the people of England I love as my life.

I would down on my knees in the dirt and the mire,

If it would but induce you, my friends, to retire.

MO B.

[142] M O B.

My lord, with submission, we must interpose; 'Twere a terrible pity to dirt these fine cloaths.

LORD

My cloaths I don't mind; and as for the dirt, I value it not, 'tis the fashion at court.

I know you're all loyal, I wish I could serve you;

From the danger than threatens, I fain would preferve you;

So I beg you'll disperse, and go home to your wives,

Nor foolishly stay at the risk of your lives.

If recourse must be had to the milit'ry power,

I dread the event of a fingle half-hour.

If fuch tumults as these were in France or in Spain,

Five hundred by this time had furely been flain;
But the k- loves you all with fuch ardent affection,

He would lay down his life for the people's protection.

M O B.

Oh! God bless the k-, he's the best of mankind;

We wish those about him were all of his mind;

No guards would be wanting to keep us in awe,

As we honour his name, and we reverence the law.

Let elections be free; and whoever we chuse, His seat in the house you should never refuse:

And if great men were honest, the poor would be quiet;

So yourselves you may thank for this bustle and riot.

O D E.

FOR THE INSTALLATION OF AUGUSTUS HENRY,

BUKE OF GRAFTON, CHANCELLOR OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE.

BY MR. GRAY.

AIR.

HENCE! avaunt! 'tis holy ground,
Comus and his midnight crew,
And ignorance with looks profound,
And dreaming Sloth of pallid hue!
Mad Sedition's cry prophane,
Servitude that hugs her chain,
Nor in these consecrated bow'rs
Let painted Flatt'ry hide her serpent train in flow'rs.

CHORUS.

Nor Envy pale, nor creeping Gain, Dare the Muses' walk to stain, While bright-ey'd Science walks around; Hence! avaunt! 'tis holy ground.

RRCL

[245]

GRAY

TRAVESTIR.

AIR.

HENCE! avaunt! 'tis venal ground,
Wilkes and all his free-born crew;
Within our pale no room is found,
Ye modern Algernons, for you.
Mute be the bold Alcaic strain
Of liberty, that spurns a chain,
Nor in these pliant courtly bow'rs
Let harsh Philippic weeds choke adulation's flow'rs.

CHORUS.

Virtue hence! with brow severe!

Public spirit come not near,

While servile int'rest walks around;

Hence! avaunt! 'tis venal ground!

RECI-

[146]

RECITATIVE.

From yonder realms of empyrean day
Bursts on my ear th' indignant lay!
There sit the sainted sage, the bard divine,
The sew whom Genius gave to shine,
Thro' ev'ry unborn age, and undiscover'd clime:
Rapt in celestial transport they;
Yet hither oft a glance from high
They send of tender sympathy,
To bless the place, where on their op'ning soul
First the genuine ardour stole;
'Twas Milton struck the steep-ton'd shell,
And as the choral warblings round him swell,
Meek Newton's self bends from his state sublime,
And nods his hoary head, and listens to the rhyme.

AIR.

- "Ye brown o'er-arching groves,
- " That contemplation loves,
- " Where willowy Camus lingers with delight,
 - " Oft at blush of dawn
 - "I've trod your level lawn,
- " Oft woo'd the gleam of Cynthia's silver light,
- " In cloisters dim, far from the haunts of folly,
- '4' With freedom by my fide, and foft-ey'd melancholy."

RECITATIVE.

From yonder realms of ministerial day
Steals on my ear the soothing lay;
There mitted hirelings, dukes divine,
The lead which Fortune made to shine,
Thro' ev'ry age corrupt, and unenlighten'd clime,
Warm in the royal sunshine they;
Yet hither oft a glance from high
They send of tender sympathy,
To bless the place, where on their venal soul
The pand'ring eye of favour stole;
N—st—e beams a fost'ring ray,
And while his mid-day splendors play,
A hoary train of priess, from stalls sublime,
Bask in his beams, and bless the golden time.

AIR.

- "Ye brown o'er-arching groves, .
- " Which adulation loves,
- "Where willowy Camus lingers with delight,
 - " Oft at blush of dawn,"

I've wish'd for sleeves of lawn-

Oft woo'd the gleam of Bute's bright northern light, In crowded levees, far from Virtue's haunt, With flatt'ry on my tongue, and temporizing cant.

[148]

RECITATIVE.

But hark! the portals found, and pacing forth, With folemn steps and flow, High potentates, and dames of royal birth, And mitred fathers in long order go; Great Edward, with the lilies on his brow From haughty Gallia torn; And fad Chatillon on her bridal morn. That wept her bleeding love; and princely Clare: And Anjou's heroine; and the paler rose, The rival of her crown and of her woes; And either Henry there, The murder'd faint, and the majestic lord That broke the bonds of Rome. Their tears, their little triumphs o'er, Their human passions move no more, Save charity that glows beyond the tomb.

[ACCOMPANIED.]

All that on Granta's fruitful plain
Rich streams of regal bounty pour'd,
And bade their awful fanes and turrets rise,
To hail their Fitzroy's festal morning come,
And thus they speak in soft accord
The liquid language of the skies.

[149]

RECITATIVE

But hark! the portals found, and pacing forth, With folemn step, and slow, High potentates, and dames of royal birth, And mitred Mothers in long order go-Great G, with the trophies on his brow, From bleeding England torn-While W--y, widow'd on her bridal morn, Weeps for her absent love, and B-d dim, False M——ue, and all the rav'nous crew, That England's constitution slew, And lopp'd each vig'rous limb. A band accurs'd of m ---- 11-ds Who forg'd for Britons-chains; Their wiles, their damned triumphs o'er, Their hopes to stand are now no more, Despair alone remains.

[ACCOMPANIED.]

All that on Granta's thirsty plain
Rich streams of regal bounty drank,
For whom our aweful fanes and turrets sprung
To hail their F—y's festal morning come,
And sweetly fing on Camus' bank
The liquid lyes of flatt'ry's tongue.

[148]

RECITATIVE.

But hark! the portals found, and pacing forth, With folemn steps and slow, High potentates, and dames of royal birth, And mitred fathers in long order go; Great Edward, with the lilies on his brow From haughty Gallia torn; And fad Chatillon on her bridal morn, That wept her bleeding love; and princely Clare: And Anjou's heroine; and the paler rose, The rival of her crown and of her woes; And either Henry there, The murder'd faint, and the majestic lord That broke the bonds of Rome. Their tears, their little triumphs o'er, Their human passions move no more, Save charity that glows beyond the tomb.

[ACCOMPANIED.]

All that on Granta's fruitful plain
Rich streams of regal bounty pour'd,
And bade their awful fanes and turrets rise,
To hail their Fitzroy's festal morning come,
And thus they speak in soft accord
The liquid language of the skies.

[149]

RECITATIVE.

But hark! the portals found, and pacing forth, With folemn step, and slow, High potentates, and dames of royal birth, And mitred Mothers in long order go-Great G., with the trophies on his brow, From bleeding England torn-While W--y, widow'd on her bridal morn, Weeps for her absent love, and B-d dim, False M——ue, and all the rav'nous crew, That England's constitution slew. And lopp'd each vig'rous limb. A band accurs'd of m ——— 11—ds Who forg'd for Britons—chains; Their wiles, their damned triumphs o'er. Their hopes to stand are now no more, Despair alone remains.

[ACCOMPANIED.]

All that on Granta's thirsty plain
Rich streams of regal bounty drank,
For whom our aweful fanes and turrets sprung
To hail their F—y's festal morning come,
And sweetly sing on Camus' bank
The liquid lyes of slatt'ry's tongue.

RECITATIVE.

But hark ! the portals found, and pacing forth, With folemn fleps and flow, High potentates, and dames of royal birth, And mitred fathers in long order go; Great Edward, with the lilies on his brow From haughty Gallia torn; And fad Chatillon on her bridal morn, That wept her bleeding love; and princely Clare: And Anjou's heroine; and the paler rose, The rival of her crown and of her woes; And either Henry there. The murder'd faint, and the majestic lord That broke the bonds of Rome. Their tears, their little triumphs o'er, Their human passions move no more, Save charity that glows beyond the tomb.

[ACCOMPANIED.]

All that on Granta's fruitful plain
Rich streams of regal bounty pour'd,
And bade their awful fanes and turrets rise
To hail their Fitzroy's festal morning come
And thus they speak in soft accord
The liquid language of the skies.

[151]

QUARTETTO.

What is grandeur? what is pow'r?

The mead of bribes and falsehood's balm!
What is foul corruption's palm?

The curse of every child of grace—.
Sweet is the breath of vernal show'r,
The bees collected honey sweet--Sweet music's fall; but sweeter yet
To us, a pension or a place.

RECITATIVE.

Foremost, and leaning from her golden cloud,
The goddess of corruption see--Welcome, my wayward son, she cries aloud,
To this thy kindred train and me,
Pleas'd in thy lineaments to trace
Thy monarch's smile, the premier's grace!

AIR.

Thy wily heart, thy poaching eye
Some wanton h--l-t shall descry,
Shalt round thy trunk her tendrils curl,
And bid her all her charms unfurl,
With Love's bewitching tricks enthrall,
And raise her---to encrease her fall.

[152]

RECITATIVE.

Lo! Granta waits to lead her blooming band,
Not obvious, not obtrusive she;
No vulgar praise, no venal incense slings,
Nor dares with courtly tongue resin'd
Profane thy inborn royaly of mind:
She reveres herself and thee!
With modest pride, to grace thy youthful brow
The laureat wreaths that Cecil wore she brings,
And to thy just, thy gentle hand
Submits the sasces of her sway,
While spirits blest above and men below
Join with glad voice the loud symphonious lay!

GRAND CHORUS.

Through the wild waves as they roar,
With watchful eye, and dauntless mien,
Thy steady course of honour keep;
Nor fear the rocks, nor seek the shore--The star of Brunswick shines serene,
And gilds the horrors of the deep.

[153]

RECITATIVE.

Lo! Granta waits to lead her courtly band,
Nor coy, nor a recluse is she;
No praise sincere, no heart-sprung incense slings,
Nor dares with honest phrase, and plain,
Sully the glories of thy reign-She reveres herself---not thee!
With selfish pride to grace thy spurious pow'r,
The sading wreaths, which int'rest wove, she brings,
And to the pressure of thy hand
The matron yields her wither'd charms,
Whilst prebendaries, deans, and b-ps cow'r,
To bring her to thy salse adult'rous arms.

GRAND CHORUS.

While the wild waves boil and roar,

From the threat'ning tempest slee,

'The serpent course of traitors keep;

Cautious fail- nor quit the shore;

If Brunswick's star should set to thee,

'Twould wreck thee in the howling deep.

ANOTHER.

AIR.

HENCE! avaunt, 'tis facred ground;
Let pallid freedom ever fly,
Let innocence in chains be bound,
Nor e'er come truth or virtue nigh!
Opposition's cry prophane,
Liberty that scorns the chain,
Nor in these consecrated fields,
Let injur'd justice weep, that she to tyrants yields.

CHORUS.

Nor dare bright truth, the patriot's friend, The minister's high walk offend, While stern ey'd F-tz-y stalks around; Hence! avaunt! 'tis sacred ground.

RECITATIVE.

From yonder realms of ministerial sway
Bursts on my ear th' applauding lay:
There sit the pension'd sage, the peer prophane,
The sew whom interest gives to reign
O'er every unborn place, or yet unclaim'd domain.
Deep in the nation's business they,
Yet hither oft a glance from high,
They send of triumph and of joy,

RECITATIVE.

But hark! the portals found, and pacing forth, With folemn step, and slow, High potentates, and dames of royal birth, And mitred Mothers in long order go-Great G-, with the trophies on his brow, From bleeding England torn-While W-y, widow'd on her bridal morn, Weeps for her absent love, and B-d dim, False M——ue, and all the rav'nous crew, That England's conflitution flew, And lopp'd each vig'rous limb. A band accurs'd of m -11-ds Who forg'd for Britons-chains; Their wiles, their damned triumphs o'er, Their hopes to fland are now no more, Despair alone remains.

[ACCOMPANIED.]

All that on Granta's thirfly plain
Rich streams of regal bounty drank, whom our aweful fanes and turrets sprung ill their F—y's festal morning come, the sing on Camus' bank

ngue.

[156]

The Sp-k-r's fon, and the majestic chief,
That trains the Surry bands;
Their triumphs, their addresses o'er,
Their county interest moves no more,
Save at Tha-s D-tt-n, or in O-kh-m lands.

[ACCOMPANIED.]

He that on Thame's greedy shore,
For streams of royal bounty sighs;
And they who wait for sickle Fortune's call,
To hail their F—tz—y's fav'rite morning come;
And thus they speak in statt'ry's guise,
The liquid language of Whitehall.

QUARTETTO.

What are pensions without power? Heavy toil, insipid pain.
Who but would wish like thee to gain. The guidance of the public weal? Sweet is D---nd---s's golden show'r, Cli-e's visionary treasure sweet, Sweet H-ll--d's rise, but sweeter yet, The still small place of privy seal.

RECITATIVE.

But hark! the portals found, and pacing forth, With folemn step, and slow, High potentates, and dames of royal birth, And mitred Mothers in long order go-Great G-, with the trophies on his brow, From bleeding England torn-While W-y, widow'd on her bridal morn, Weeps for her absent love, and B-d dim, False M——ue, and all the rav'nous crew, That England's constitution slew, And lopp'd each vig'rous limb. A band accurs'd of m --- 11-ds Who forg'd for Britons-chains; Their wiles, their damned triumphs o'er, Their hopes to stand are now no more, Defpair alone remains.

[ACCOMPANIED.]

All that on Granta's thirfly plain
Rich streams of regal bounty drank, hom our aweful fanes and turrets sprung oir F—y's festal morning come, fing or Camus' bank

oue.

158]

GRAND CHORUS

Through the broad streets as they roar,
With watchful eye and dauntless mien,
Thy steady conduct ne'er relax,
Nor heed their noise, nor fear the Tow'r:
The star of S---rt skines serene,
And gilds the horrors of the axe.

TO ANY MINISTER OR GREAT MAN.

WHETHER you lead the patriot band,
Or in the class of courtiers stand,
Or prodebitly prefer
The middle course, with equal zeal
To serve both King and common-weal,
Your grace, my lord, or fir!

Know, minister! whate'er your plan,
Whate'er your politics, great man,
You must expect detraction;
Though of clean hand and honest heart,
Your greatness must expect to smart
Beneath the rod of saction.

Like blockheads, eager in dispute, The mob, that many headed brute, [r59]

All bark and bawl together;
For continental measures some,
And some cry, keep your troops at home,
And some are pleas'd with neither.

Lo! a militia guards the land:
Thousands applaud your saving hand,
And hail your their protector;
While thousands censure and defame,
And brand you with the hideous name
Of state-quack and projector.

Are active, vig'rous means preferr'd?

Lord! what harangues are hourly heard

Of wasted blood and treasure!

Then all for enterprize and plot,

And, pox o'this unmeaning Scot!

If cautious be your measure.

Corruption's influence you despise;
These list your glory to the skies,
Those pluck your glory down;
So strangely diff'rent is the note
Of scoundrels that have right to vote,
And scoundrels that have none.

Ye then who guide the car of state,
Scorning the rabble's idle prate,
Proceed as ye design'd;
In rugged ways, the reins and steeds
Alone the skilful driver heeds,
Nor stays to cut behind.

ON PART OF THE UNIVERSITY-CHURCH IN OXFORD BEING CONVERTED INTO A LAW-SCHOOL.

YES, yes; you may rail at the Pope as you please, But trust me that miracles never will cease. See here—an event that no mortal suspected! See Law and Divinity closely connected! 'To prove the old proverb, which long hath seem'd odd, That the nearest the church are the farthest from God.

E L E G Y

TO THE MEMORY OF THE LATE KING.

PEACE to thy royal shade, illustrious King!
Sleep sweetly on beneath thy blazon'd tomb;
Nor yet be startled, tho' a tale I fing,
Might call up spirits from the Stygian gloom.

How bleft were once the subjects of thy sway!

And bleffings still they hop'd from such a root.

But ah! the flatt'ring prospect fades away!

Keen Northern blasts have spoilt the promis'd fruit!

The

[161]

The darling object of the British state,
A native prince, on whom we counted high.
No sooner mounted on thy vacant seat,
Than joy began to smile in ev'ry eye.

But, ah! how dark are heav'n's mysterious ways!
In error's mazes how are mortals led!
Blasted the wreaths, and wither'd all the bays,
We fondly wove to crown his regal head.

The partial minion, fraught with subtle wiles,.
Soon gain'd his confidence by hellish art.:
Nor can the nation's censures, nor her smiles,.
Correct his judgment, or reform his heart.

Alas! how blind to fortune, and to fame,
Must be the prince who hugs within his breast.
A foe that always cavill'd at his claim,
And strove the sceptre from his hand to wrest.

Yet such there is—ye heav'ns forgive the fight!

Nor cou'd a Junius wake him from his dream;
In vain the people pray, the patriots write,

He nods supine o'er Tweeda's tainted stream.

Ill-fated hour! when on thy guileless youth,
The Northern star its baneful influence shed,
Turn'd all thy footsteps from the ways of truth,
And mark'd to vengeance thy

[150]

QUARTETTO.

What is grandeur? what is pow'r? Heavier toil! superior pain! What the bright reward of gain? The grateful memory of the good: Sweet is the breath of vernal show'r, The bees collected treasure sweet; Sweet music's fall—but sweeter yet The still small voice of gratitude!

RECITATIVE.

Foremost, and leaning from her golden cloud,
The venerable Margaret see—
Welcome, my noble son, she cries aloud,
To this thy kindred train and me,
Pleas'd in thy lineaments to trace
A Tudor's sire, a Beaufort's grace!

AIR.

Thy lib'ral heart, thy judging eye
The flower unheeded shall descry,
And bid it round heav'n's altars shed
The fragrance of its blushing head;
Shall raise from earth the latent gem,
To glitter on the diadem.

THE "FIRST WISH OF MY HEART", &c.
"T WAS the wish of thy heart to rivet the chain,
That festers poor man to the bone;
"Twas the wish of thy heart to quicken the pain.
That imbitters his bitterest groan.

Those blessings which reason and freedom enjoy
(For freedom and reason are one)

Twas the wish of thy heart to ensure or destroy;

—That wish—thank resistance—is gone.

And now 'tis its wish to cajole and deceive,.

To weep and by weeping betray;

For fools will imagine and courtiers conceive,

That tears can wipe murder * away.

But wing'd upon fire, the first wish of thy heart Long since has been known to the skies; Tho' dabbl'd in blood it was loth to depart, And selonious it slags as it slies.

The D of M is defired to remember Mr. Yorke. .

EXTEMPORE,

ON READING IN THE PAPERS THAT

"THE OTTOMAN PORTE PAYS GREAT ATTEN
"TION TO THE REPRESENTATIONS LATELY

" SENT BY GENERAL PAOLI."

IN vain the Corficans to Christians sue;
On savage minds the cause of virtue works;
From this strange conduct, it appears too true,
The Turks turn Christians, and the Christians Turks.
W. W.

TO THE CONQUEROR

OF LOUISBOURG, NEWFOUNDLAND, AND CANADA,

ON THE LATE NOBLE REWARD FOR ALL

VICTORIES.

"LET Amherst fall!" Corruption said:
Obedient to her call,
Our statesmen, knowing in their trade,
Re-echo'd, "Let him fall!—

He never bent before thy throne;
Nor dragg'd thy golden yoke;
Then let him fall!—and let thy fon,
Thy H——h firike the ftroke."

Thrice .

Thrice loud the Gallic cock did crow,
And thrice Britannia figh'd;
Blush'd while the v——n gave the blow,
And sunk beneath the tide.

Yet trembling for her darling land, Red with maternal shame, To Clio slew, whose honest hand Gives infamy or fame.

With downcast eyes she spoke her fear, Indignant told her grief; And pray'd the pitying muse to tear The black, the guilty leaf.

And ne'er to future ages tell
(Her Britain's fouleft stain)

How H——gh rul'd, and Amherst fell,
While B—s—k seem'd to r—n.

Justice stood by; she bent her bow, Refus'd Britannia's pray'r; Cry'd, "Hear th' irrevocable vow, "Tis by myself I swear!

No times shall wipe away their crimes;
The names in this true page
Shall blacken through succeeding times,
And slink from age to age.

While ev'ry'clime, from pole to pole,
Shall Amherst's deeds record,
The good with envy view his soul,
brave revere his sword.

And when at last to taste repose,
Which statesmen never know,
To joy's eternal fount he goes,
Where statesmen seldom go:

Then the Canadian, grateful, shall,
Low bending o'er his grave,
Sigh, while his tears fincerely fall:
He conquer'd but to save!

And Britain's froward, headfrong child .
When Britain is no more,
Shall teach the yet untrodden wild
His mem'ry to adore.

Yes, Amherst! dear to Fame and me,
Thy worth shall never die:
Time, finking by the fates decree,
In vast exercity,

· America.

E'en in the cold embrace of death,
Still careful of thy fame,
Shall with his last, his parting breath,
Pronounce our Amherst's name."

THE ANSWER.

LET Amh—ft go, his fov'reign faid,
Obedient to the call:
Our loyal hero shook his head,
" I will not go at all."

For those who bend before the throne,
Are deem'd but witless folk;
What pity, that he did not know
His place was strait bespoke!

Thrice were the minister's commands,

The warrior thrice deny'd;

Nor blush'd when Botetourt kiss'd hands,

And he was set aside.

No pension from his plunder'd land Would he receive for shame! Nor yet temptation could withstand, To make some modest claim.

With downcast eyes, a list unfurl'd
Where peerage stood in chief;
Mines thro' one quarter of the world,
Etceteras many a leaf,

O ne'er

O ne'er fet future ages count,
As Britain's foulest stain,
Such subjects priz'd to like amount,
While Brunsw-k seem'd to reign.

Discord stood by—with haggard brow,
. To Wil—s's jail repair;
Our patriots all are conning now
A universal prayer.

There liberty shall stamp your crimes.
In virtue's facred page;
A champion sitted for the times,
To gull a senseless age.

While ev'ry clime, from pole to pole, Must Amh—st's deeds record; And all confess, upon the whole, His is undue reward.

True; he was ten times better paid
Than Mordaunt* or Turenne †:
But match him at the fighting trade,
These were but trisling men.

Mordaunt, the great earl of Peterborough.

[†] Turenne, James, French general in the reign of Lewis the fourteenth.

So now at last, to taste repose,
Observant of his vow,
Most Cincinnatus-like he goes,
To grumble o'er the plough.

In that cool hour, when reason does
From passion set him free;
He'll pine to death, that e'er he was
Dup'd to this strange degree.

While o'er his tomb the Indians cry,
"Rest his ambitious soul;
Had he succeeded by the by,
We'd starv'd for want of coal."

This, Britain's froward, headstrong child, Has foreign laurels worn; We saw Wolse earn 'em in the wild, Now from his trophies torn.

Yet Amh—ft who no victories gain'd Like Bradd—k blunder'd not; Our public cheft he never drain'd, Nor shar'd what agents got.

This we will own with our last breath,
Still careful of his fame;
And grant, that at the hour of death,
All generals boast the same,

170]

ODE TO LORD NORTH,

ON HIS BEING APPOINTED COMMANDER IN CHIEF
OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS. 1770.

O Thou, whom placemen all adore,
Of the Exchequer chancellor,
And first lord of the treasury,
How can a muse in humble strain
Pretend thy merits to explain,
Or how in numbers measure you!

Let G--ft-n, shunning public strife,

Shrink in the bosom of his wife,

Scared at the York petition;

But thou shalt still maintain the field,

With * heart in two-fold conscience steel'd,

And combat opposition.

Bold in their front tho' Dowdeswell stand,
With string of motions in his hand,
Maxims of hard digestion!
Unanswer'd they shall perish all,
Clogg'd with amendments in their fall,
Or choak'd by previous question.

" Illi robur & es duplex.

Whilst thou, like Falstaff, tak'st the floor, With men in buckram thirteen score,

No cause you have to fear him:
The Sp-k-r too, with looks so big,
Waits but the motion of thy leg
To point, and call out hear him!

On either hand, from left to right,
'The chiefs all marshall'd for the fight,
Press to partake thy glory:
There B-rr--nt-n, with sugar'd tongue,
De G--y the old, and Fox the young,
The flower of oratory.

Here P-lm--f--n and blundering Cl-re, And patient Mungo every where, And Th-r-oe puts his case in; While all amid th' opposing rout The dauntless R-g-y, tall and stout, Pushes a modest face in.

E-1—t, with accents broad and strong,
And J—k—s—n, with arms so long,
Still join to help the farce on:
Ellis and St—ge their voices lend,
With O—sl—w, Wilkes's only friend,
That since has sued the parson.

With crest erect, like Priam's son,
Lead but your trusty Trojans on,
Regardless of desertion,
Like Swiss they faithfully obey,
—Like Swiss, too, they must have their pay,
Post, pension, and reversion.

In other fields let G—ft-n reap
A victory more fafe and cheap,
With flars and garters hemm'd in;
W—m—th to answer Richmond's duke,
And sober S--ndw--h to rebuke
Both Rockingham and Camden.

With Scottish p--rs complete fixteen,
B---ps in meet array are seen,
Content—to earn promotion;
And M--sf--d, ever constant found,
And M--hm--t ready to propound
In Erse a midnight motion.

Great polar star, who now secure
Beams in the sky the cynosure
Of courtly navigation,
Oh deign to shed thy influence forth
On him whose needle points at North,
Without a variation.

A CARD.

A C A R D.

NORWICH, FEB. 3, 1770.

CIndaretta congratulates her much loved Colonel Hurlo-Thrumbo, and honours him for his bold and spirited reslections on the base-born electors of Westminster, not worthy to enter the gates of his majesty's palace.

Tommy grows a fine boy; and will be big enough for an enfign in his papa's company of militia in a year or two: I brings him to London the first of April, and you will shew him St. James's and all the fine folks, but within "the gates of his majesty's palace" on account of his birth: I charge you don't let him come near any of the vulgar mechanicks or base-born mob of Westminster petitioners.

For the better understanding of the above card, we have subjoined a pastoral poem, first published during the late contested election for the county of Norfolk. With crest erect, like Priam's son,

Lead but your trusty Trojans on,

Regardless of desertion,

Like Swiss they faithfully obey,

Like Swiss, too, they must have their pay,

Post, pension, and reversion.

In other fields let G—ft-n reap
A victory more fafe and cheap,
With ftars and garters hemm'd in;
W—m—th to answer Richmond's duke,
And sober S--ndw--h to rebuke
Both Rockingham and Camden.

With Scottish p--rs complete fixteen,

B---ps in meet array are seen,

Content—to earn promotion;

And M--sf--d, ever constant found,

And M--hm--t ready to propound

In Erse a midnight motion.

Great polar star, who now secure

Beams in the sky the cynosure

Of courtly navigation,

Oh deign to shed thy influence forth

On him whose needle points at North,

Without a variation.

[175]

- Refound my tubs, my hollow tubs refound;
- " Ah me! that love should give so deep a wound!
- "Why in that house *should'st thou so strive to shine?
- " Is it more clean or better kept than mine?
- " Alas! I'm told (but they are lyes, I ween)
- " " That dirty house no mortal yet could clean:
 - "Rub as they will, and polish as they can,
 - es Pensions and bribes will iron-mould the man:
 - "Go, gentle gales! and bear my fighs away!
 - " Ah! why fo long does Hurlo-Thrumbo flay?
 - "Why feeks my foldier forts or city walls,
 - "When I can make my love less hurtful balls?
 - " Why to the camp must Hurlo-Thrumbo fly,
 - "When I can raife, and you besiege a pye?
 - " If thou must fight, for thou art born to wield,
 - "O! fight in paste the heroes of the field:
 - "Go, gentle gales! and bear my fighs away!
- " " Ah! why fo long does Hurlo-Thrumbo stay?
 - "When yester morn I turn'd my jack around,
 - " The falt-box fell portentous to the ground:
 - "Thrice mew'd the cat, and thrice she slew on Tray;
 - "Oh! think on this, and thy election day!
 - " Die, Cinderetta! ease thy hateful smart;
 - " Ambition's now the mistress of his heart:
 - "Go, gentle gales! and bear my fighs away!
 - " Ah! why fo long does Hurlo-Thrumbo flay?
 - * H --- e of C ---- 8.

- "Ah me! each object that these eyes can view,
- " Brings to my mind some pleasing form of you:
- "When in this hand the polish'd spit I hold,
- "Thy shape is here, for thou art long and cold:
- " If I the cleaver take, the joint to part,
- "Thy absence then is cleaving of my heart;
- " Or, if I strive my kitchen fire to mend,
- "Those eyes are flaming at the poker's end.
- "Go, gentle gales! and bear my fighs away!
- " Ah! why fo long does Hurlo-Thrumbo ftay?"

Thus wail'd she tearful to herself alone. The hollow tubs re-echoing every groan: When lo! her much-lov'd hero flood to view, And her heart flutter'd as she nearer drew: She fought the garret for her Sunday's pride, Pinn'd on her nims, and brush'd the fleas aside. The busy sylphs attend the dressing fair, This clears the scurf, and this pork-lards her hair: This with its breath reduc'd her tear fwoln eye, Another fans the pouting nostrils dry: Down came the damfel with superior grace, With all the stew-pan's radiance in her face: So dredg'd, fo finish'd, and so soft her look, Now trips a Goddess, and now smiles a cook: Flies to her Hero, with refiftless charms, And clasps the long, cold Col'nel in her arms.

THE LYE

- I.

G O truth, old-fashion'd guest,
To teach unwelcome news,
Thyself shalt bear the test,
When all do thee resuse.
Go both to low and high,
And give them all the lye.

II.

Go tell the he's weak,
And obstinate withal;
Tell him (for truth will speak)
He's lost the love of all;
And if he will reply,
Fear not to give the lye.

III.

Tell statesmen they're not whole,
By vice uninterrupted;
In body and in foul
They're shamefully corrupted.
If statesmen will reply,
Give statesmen all the lye.

IV.

Go tell the court, it skreens

Knaves, murd'rers, and defaulters;

It scoundrels entertains

That worthy are of halters;

I 3

baA

[178]

And if it dare reply,
Then give it straight the lye.

V

Go tell the church it flumbers,
And orders gives to fools;
Say, churchmen there are numbers,
Who dullness learn by rules:
And if the church reply,
Dare yet to give the lye.

VI.

Go tell the lawyer's courts,

Their lingering far worse is,

With pleas, demurs, reports,

Then all our other curses:

And if they dare reply,

Quick give them all the lye.

VII.

Go tell physicians grave,

Who boast their mighty skill,

Some few indeed they save,

But many more they kill:

And if they will reply,

Fail not to give the lye.

VIII.

Go tell the stage directors,

True taste with them sure scarce is,
While they are such protectors

Of baby-pleasing farces:

And

[179]

And as they yield reply, So give them all the lye,

IX.

Away, and fear not, tho'
They think thee quite uncouth;
For thou may'ft let them know,
Thy name is Downright Truth:
And wish them no reply,
For thou must give the lye.

THE PETTICOAT ADMINISTRATION.

BY CAPT. 7

Peace, idiot man; woman shall ever rule; How oft to her you've prov'd yourself a sool.

LONG have the men triumphant reign'd Over this giddy nation; But neither law or truth maintain'd, Tho' each maintain'd his station.

In government there is no truth,

Lord Egmont swears, odd rat 'em,
'Tis prov'd by Jemmy Twitcher's mouth,

And by the Earl of Chatham.

The outs they rail at those who're in;
The inns at those who're out;
Whigs roar to-day for Wilkes and Glynn,
And then for John of Bute.

No

No cod-fmack shifts her fails so quick,

Nor makes so many tacks;

They lye, they swear, at nothing stick,

At Arthur's or Almack's.

The ribband I this day had given,
'Twas yesterday to two;

To-morrow 'twill be hung on seven,
And then, the Lord knows who!

Away with falique law and rule;
Why, give it to our war-fons?

Instead of dangling on a fool—
Pray hang it on Miss Parsons!

But now, to cut the matter short, Grieve not that all are mad; When lying is the master's fort, Servants will be as bad.

I therefore to the world propose,

No more of Wilkes and Bute;

Let them be friends, who've long been foes,

In air Sir Fletcher mute.

Senate! attend: I have a plan
Drawn up by hands not common;
That government may end in man,
And now commence in woman.

I think

I think I fee the statesman stare,

The law and clergy spar,

While soldiers bend unto the fair,

And like the softer war.

I know no man dare disapprove

The plan which now I draw;

Charlotte, she is the queen we love,

Of England and her law.

Grafton the president shall be
Of council, for she's able;
Then you'll have cards and burgundy,
Down to the chaplain's table.

The treasury let Kingston take;
Yet, that is scarce enough
Two paltry fireworks to make,
And buy her pins and snuff.

Thy daughters, Har—n, and thee, What little post will charm ye? The navy treasurer one shall be, The other pay the army.

Northumberland master of the horse Astride shall nobly pass; And, to help out her gen'rous purse, Shew too the Queen's sine as. One for the houshold we must find,

There Ch—d— let us hitch in;

She's of a plain and homely mind,

And fit to fill a kitchen.

Th' exchequer, who's fo fit to grace
As lovely Mrs. Pitt?

Especially since she's out of place,
And loves to pick a bit.

Sweet lady Sarah *, she shall rule
Where she can move and feel;
She shall command each am'rous fool,
And have the privy seal.

Let's for a lord chief justice look— What for the Common Pleas? There shove my lady B—lb—ke, She can divorce with ease.

Poor lady V—e, I'm much afraid Pension or place can't hold; Unless 'tis at the board of trade, And she's for trade too old.

If Richmond's ranger will but please
Great lady E——e's rigg,
Let her plough up the park for pease
To feed her fav'rite pig.

Bunbury.

For maids of honour, we must choose Men who are strong and stout; When ladies call that won't refuse, Nor slur what they're about.

Earl P—y then shall take the lead,
That man of muckle might;
Sprung from old Chevy-chace's breed,
And form'd for love's delight.

Sweet lady P—y shall no more

Complain of loveless nights;

Her gentle spouse shall be turn'd o'er

For am'rous court delights.

M—e, V——s, A——, and Lord C—k,
Shall close this smirking train;
Well made for maids of honour work,
Too delicate for pain.

Now let us fill three holy fees, Sobriety can't flur 'em; Women can prey with as much ease As Briftol, York, or Durham.

V-fi-t, St-h-e, A-er, now Supply those holy places; Cards to the chaplains pray allow, But disavow all graces! For praying and religion too
Have got at such a top,
We're lost, unless your doctrine new
To goodness puts a stop.

Old Canterbury shall not have
A 'tissicky old grunter,
With one foot finking in the grave,
While we've a Kitty H—er.

Pem—e so well on honour writes,

Must sermons make in plenty;

They'll pass your time 'tween meals and White's,

His doctrine will relent ye.

Old lady Huntingdon no more
Shall be reforted to;
Who won't quit Satan and threefcore,
For heaven in twenty-two.

Sweet bishop Kitty, when you pray, Who will refuse to kneel? You will reduce each son of clay, Though he were stiff as steel.

For London, one both wise and grave
Must be, yet soft and barren;
Sir George, we must your goodness crave,
To spare us bishop Warren.

To one I'll give the Admiralty, Who'll rule it with a nod; She shall an Amphitrite be, And rule each liquid god.

Earl P-y's lady there shall reign,
Per terram et per mare,
And make our sea-gulls still remain
The gallant aves raræ.

As for the rest, I wou'd'nt place Under their skill a skuller;
Pray do you think old Neptune's face
Was ever seen by Buller?

Who can controul the navy board,

Like Kn—es sweet, fair, and gay?

With captains she will then be stor'd,

And prick them of their pay.

The wondrous wife Sir Thomas Slade,
Who other's genius mocks,
Shall fly to madam Ben---k's aid,
To make chain-pumps and blocks.

Fair H--n--y, C---l--r, B——by,
Shall roll in routs and cards;
They shall the three surveyors be
Of all the royal yards.

For poet laureat we must chuse A wench behind the curtain; An am'rous, incoherent muse, A Philippina Burton.

For fecretaries of the flate,
By heavens I'll find a fcore,
Wifer and of a higher date,
Than any men in ftore.

M'Caulay, first department grace, Lennox shall then come a'ter: If ye want Greek in such a place, What think ye of Miss Carter?

For this, good doctor, I'll be bail; She cannot be revil'd, For if the men at court should fail, She'll get you all with child.

For Mrs. Gibson, who's so wise?

Her parts have no deception;

For youth and age she will suffice,

And please with quick conception.

O! she will give ye special sport,

What nurses shall we need!

What cradles then will wag at court,

To hush this pretty breed!

Let L—ham command a fleet,
Boscawen taught her how;
And since she did the admiral beat,
The French she must bring low.

To fight like some's an easy trade, Our arms let * Garnier lead! She'll trim ten, like the Orlean maid, Or lord George Sackville's breed.

One shall command our horse, won't sinch,
Well known to every trooper;
In charging she'll not lose an inch,
I'll warrant Lucy Cooper.

If ye approve this little sketch,

I'll end all perturbation;

And with the aid of good Jack Ketch,

Will calm this frantick nation.

MOLLY MACHIAVEL.

Now Mrs. May.

TO MISS MOLLY MACHIAVEL,

ON HER PETTICOAT ADMINISTRATION.

I.

WHAT! all the posts of honour gone t
Who can refrain from laughter,
To see the T-wnsh-nd's left alone,
The mother and the daughter!

II.

Long and well known to public fame,
For gallantry and wit,
The dowager puts in her claim,
And fwears she'll have a bit.

III.

With Williams, Winnington, it feems, A merry life she led; And hackney'd in all ways and means, She was to business bred.

IV.

The back-stairs be her province then,
The bed-chamber without;
And but the very best of men
Will e'er get in or out.

v.

Arm'd with a battle-axe in hand,

Love's emblem in a florm;

Who shall the pensioners command?

The gay, the gallant O——.

VI.

Dear Molly then for once be kind,

Their proper posts assign 'em,

And if a chaster pair you find,

With pleasure they'll resign them.

ON SOME ENCROACHMENTS ON THE RIVER.

FOUR Scotchmen, by the names of Adams, Who keep their coaches, and their madams, Quoth John, in fulky mood, to Thomas, Have stole the very river from us.

O, Scotland! long it has been faid Thy teeth are sharp for English bread; What! seize our bread and water too, And use us worse than jailors do! 'Tis true 'tis hard!—'tis hard 'tis true!

Ye friends of George, and friends of James, Envy us not our river Thames: The Pr—fs, fond of raw bon'd faces, May give you all our posts and places; Take all—to gratify your pride, But dip your oatmeal in the Clyde.

LONDINENSIS.

[190]

LIBERTY HALL

OLD Homer! but what have we with him to do? What are Grecians or Trojans to me or to you? Such heathenish heroes no more I'll invoke; Choice spirits assist me, attend hearts of oak.

Toll loll, &c.

Sweet peace, belov'd handmaid of science and art, Unanimity, take your Petitioner's part; Accept of my song, 'tis the best I can do— But first, may it please ye, my service to you.

Perhaps my Address you may premature think; Because I have mention'd no toass as I drink; There are many fine toass, but the best of them all Is the toast of the times; that is, Liberty-hall.

That fine British building by Alfred was fam'd, Its grand corner-stone Magna Charta is nam'd; Independency came at Integrity's call, And form'd the front pillars of Liberty-hall.

That manor our forefathers bought with their blood, And their fons, and their fons fons, have prov'd the deeds good;

By that title we'll live, by that title we'll fall, For life is not life out of Liberty-hall.

[191]

In her mantle of honour, each star-spangled fold, Playing bright in the sunshine, the burnish of gold; Truth beams on her breast; see, at Loyalty's call, The genius of England in Liberty-hall.

The sweet-smelling courtlings of ribband and lace, The spaniels of power, and bounty's disgrace, So supple, so fervile, so passive ye fall; But passive obedience lost Liberty-hall.

But when Revolution had fettled the crown, And natural reason knock'd tyranny down, No frowns cloath'd with terror appear'd to appall, The doors were thrown open of Liberty-hall.

See England triumphant, her ships sweep the sea, Her standard is Justice, her watch word be free; Our King is our countryman, Englishmen all, God bless him and bless us in Liberty-hall.

Ou vere is des all—Monsieur wants to know; 'Tis neither at Marli, Versailles, Fontainbleau: 'Tis a palace of no mortal architect's art, For Liberty-hall is an Englishman's heart.

O D E

TO ST. STEPHEN.

Par pari referto.

T.

FIRST martyr of unlawful power!
Protect us in this threat'ning hour,
O let not truth to numbers yield!
From priests, apostates, knaves designs,
Desend thy temple, guard thy shrines,
Our father's fanctuary and shield.

II.

Shall reptiles foul those walls profane,
Where Hamden, Pym bade freedom's train
Assert the native rights of man?
Leagued in banditti they appear,
With racks and slavery in their rear,
And black corruption in the van.

III.

See jockey Grafton's whipper-in
The miserable farce begin,
Horse-mouthing, splutt'ring, blust'ring North;
Mark how each puppet plays its antic,
Ambler the dull, or Clare the frantic—
Just at their master calls them forth.

IV.

Not O—w's felf secure can dose, Order'd his brainless skull t' expose, And L—ne too must be display'd; To shew the statesman's magic tricks, From what a pair of wretched sticks, Two lordly placemen may be made.

 \mathbf{v} .

Barrington's namby-pamby vile

Might raise too the contemptuous smile,
But horror checks our just disdain.

O had thy dulness but inspir'd

Th' imperial guard, no Scot had fir'd,
No Briton fall'n on yonder plain !!

VI.

Then had the poppies round thy head, Unstain'd with blood, their influence shed, Mild as they sleepy Fox adorn; Nor hadst thou shewn how seldom part The senseless head, th' unseeling heart; Nor hadst thou turn'd to hate our scorn.

VII.

Ah! gentle Conway! fix'd at laft, Nor longer veer'd by ev'ry blaft,

* St. George's Fields.

int'reft

[194]

Int'rest 'gainst honour nicely weigh. Remember Townshend's doubtful fame, Remember Yorke—the Trimmer's shame O'ertakes thy ling'ring long delay.

VIII.

Welcome hereditary worth,

No doubt, no blush belies thy birth,

Prone as th' infernal siends to evil.

If that black face, and that black heart,

Be not old Holland's counterpart,

Holland himself's unlike the devil.

IX.

Hear, hear him! peace! each hoary pate!
While ribaldry succeeds debate,
Learn pun and wit, from youth high mettled—
Spain soon shall rue his sage advice,
Soon Reynard! (by his box and dice)
Shall all thy long accounts be settled.

X.

Shake off thy maiden fears—arife,
Smooth-spoken Rigby, claim thy prize—
Burnish thy shining front anew.
Shall Fox, shall Harley, Luttrell dare,
With thine their foreheads to compare,
Great boatswain of the Bloomsbury crew?

XI.

XI.

Say, brother Nares, and brother Leigh,
How earn you here the paltry fee?
What cause, what int'rest brought ye in?
For shame! in filken gowns appear!
Ye've not the soul—ah! blush to wear
The robe of independent Glynn.

XII.

The filken livery Wallace graces,
And Thurlow knows it leads to places,
And foon may be with ermine lin'd.
Proceed fweet Shot and Rot! nor fear,
While Bully Norton holds the chair,
Fresh wreaths thy placid brows shall bind.

· XIII.

Oh! 'till fuch petty tyrants cease
To mar our freedom and our peace,
A truce, kind heaven! with Bourbon's pride:
Grant us but vigour to oppose
These spoilers, these domestic foes,
Britons can fear no power beside!

A FRAGMENT.

BY THE AUTHOR OF THE MONODY TO THE MEMORY OF A YOUNG LADY, &c.

COME, my dear girl, let's feek the peaceful vale.
Where honour, truth, and innocence prevail:
Let's fly this curfed town, a nest of slaves,
Where fortune smiles not but on fools or knaves!
Who merit claim proportion'd to their gold,
And truth and innocence are bought and sold,
An humble competence we have in store,
Mere food and raiment—Kings can have no more—
A glorious patriarchal life we'll lead;
See the fruits ripen, and the lambkins feed;
Frequent observe the labours of the spade,
And joy to see each yearly toil repaid.

In some sequester'd spot a bow'r shall stand,
The grateful task of thy Lorenzo's hand;
Where the sweet woodbine class the mantling vine,
Emblem of faithful loves—like Nan's and mine.
Here will we sit when ev'ning shades prevail,
And hear the Night-bird tell its plaintive tale;
'Till Nature's voice shall summon us away,
To gather spirits for th' approaching day—
Then on thy breast I'll lay my weary head,
A pillow softer than a monarch's bed!

A PRE-

A PREFACE

&C. TO MILTON'S AREOPAGITICA, A SPEECH FOR THE LIBERTY OF UNLICENSED PRINTING:

NOT INSERTED IN MILTON'S WORKS (PRINTED WITH MILTON'S SPEECH, AS A PAMPHLET, FOR A. MILLAR, IN THE STRAND, 1738.)

This is true liberty, when free-born men, Having to advife the public, may speak free, Which he who can, and will, deserves high praise; Who neither can nor will, may hold his peace; What can be juster in a state than this?

EURIPID. HICETID.

THERE is no need of a Preface to recommend this admirable defence of the best of human rights, to any one who has ever heard of the Divine Milton: and it is impossible to produce better arguments, or to set them in a more convincing, awakening light.

Is it possible that any free-born Briton, who is capable of thinking, can ever lose all sense of religion and virtue, and of the dignity of human nature to such a degree, as to wish for that universal ignorance, darkness, and barbarity, against which the absolute freedom of the press is the only preservative? For what else spreads light, or disfuses knowledge through the world? But it seems, as a sense of the Vol. IV.

value of health is fometimes lost in the midst of its full enjoyment; fo men, through a habit of liberty. may become infensible of its inestimable worth: otherwise, would not every one awake, rouse himfelf, and fay, when the most dear and valuable of all the privileges that government is defigned to protect, is menaced, that he will fooner part with life itself, than with that liberty, without which life is not worth the having: that he will fooner fuffer his eyes to be put out, than his understanding to be exsinguished? We are told in a history of a * people, that after they had been inured to slavery, were in a panic fear when their liberty was offered to them. And this terrible effect of flavery ought to make every lover of mankind tremble at the thoughts of any fleps or approaches towards the diminution of liberty. " For without it, as Homer has told us, men foon " cease to be men: they soon cease to be rational " creatures."

Now without the absolute unbounded freedom of writing and publishing, there is no liberty; no shadow of it: it is an empty sound. For what can liberty mean, if it does not mean the liberty of exercising, improving, and informing our understandings? "A people have liberty, said a truly good the king of England, when they are free as thought

^{*} The Cappadocians. † Elfiid.

" is free. What is it that makes a city? (faid the 46 good Alcaus, a poet, whose muse was always. s facred and faithful to the best of causes) it is not " walls and buildings; no, it is being inhabited by men; by men, who know themselves to be men, " and have fuitable notions of the dignity of human of nature: by men, who know what it is alone that " exalts them above the brutes." Can we be either virtuous or religious, without the free use of our reason; without the means of knowledge? And can we have knowledge, if men dare not freely study, and as freely communicate the fruits of their studies? What is it that distinguishes human society from a brutish herd, but the flourishing of the arts and sciences: the free exercise of wit and reason? What . can government mean, intend, or produce, that is worthy of man, or beneficial to him, as he is a rational creature, besides wisdom, knowledge, virtue, and science? Is it merely indeed that we may eat, drink, fleep, fing and dance with fecurity, that we choose governors, subject ourselves to their administration, and pay taxes? Take away the arts, religion, knowledge, virtue (all of which must flourish or fink together) and in the name of goodness, what is left to us that is worth enjoying or protecting? Yet take away the liberty of the prefs, and we are all at once fiript of the use of our noblest faculties: our fouls themselves are imprisoned in a dark dun-K 2

geon: we may breathe, but we cannot be faid to

If the end of governors and government is not to diffuse with a liberal, unsparing, equal hand, true rational happiness; but to make the bulk of mankind beafts of burden, that a few may wallow in brutish pleasures: then it is confiseent politicks, to root out the defire and love of light and knowledge. Certain Scythian flaves, that they might work the harder, had only their eyes destroyed. But to extinguish human understanding, and establish a kingdom of darkness, is just so far more barbarous than even that monstrous cruelty, as the mind excels the body; or as understanding and reason are superior to sense. Cardinal Richlieu fays, in his Political Testament, "That subjects with knowledge, sense and reason, are as monfrous as a beaft with hundreds of eyes " would be; and that fuch a beaft will never bear " its burden peaceably. Whence he infers, it is im-" possible to promote despotic power, while learn-" ing is encouraged and extended. The people must " be hood-winked, or rather blinded, if one would " have them tame and patient drudges. In short, 46 you must treat them every way like pack-horses, or " mules, not excepting the bells about their necks, " which, by their perpetual jingling, may be of use to drown their cares." Now this is plain dealing, and confisent politicks. But to talk of liberty and free government, public good and rational happiness, as requiring limitations on the press, and licenfers of books, is as absurd, as to speak of liberty in a dungeon, with chains on every limb. Hobbes too was confistent with himself, and advises those who aim at absolute dominion, to defroy all the ancient Greek and Latin authors: because if they are read, principles of liberty, and just fentiments of the dignity and rights of mankind must be imbibed. But can there be more glaring bare-faced nonfense than to fay, "That the very support of a free constitustion requires the extinction of the press?" that is, the extinction of the only means of knowing what we are as men and christians: what our natures are capable of: what is our just happiness, and how we ought to be treated by our governors: that is, by those whom we have entrusted with the management of our interests and concerns.

I hope it will never be this nation's misfortune to fall into the hands of an administration, that do not from their fouls abhor any thing that has but the remotest tendency towards the erestion of a new and arbitrary jurisdiction over the press: or can otherwise look upon any attempt that way, than as the greatest impiety, the cruellest, the wickedest, the most irreligious thing that can be imagined. Would it not be K 3 facrilegiously.

facrilegiously robbing God of the only worship he delights in, the worship of the heart and understanding? Can there be religion or virtue without reason, thought, and choice? Or can reason, thinking, knowledge and choice, subsist without the only conceivable means of making men wife and understanding, rational and virtuous? What is the kingdom of Christ? Doth not our Saviour delight in calling it light, and a kingdom of light? And what did he come to destroy but the kingdom of darkness? And can there be a kingdom of light, without the liberty, the unconstrained liberty of diffusing light and knowledge? What is the reformation, or what does it mean but the liberty, the absolute and perfect liberty of correcting and refuting errors, and of undeceiving mankind? What is it that we call Protestantism, but a resolution stedfastly and undauntedly to oppose all encroachments upon rational liberty, the liberty of the judgment and understanding; and to maintain it as our most valuable treasure, our greatest and noblest privilege, in comparison of which, all other rights are mean and trifling, and hardly deserve the name of bleffings and advantages? A free Protestant country, without the liberty of the press, is a contradiction in terms; it is free slavery, or enchained liberty. Light and darkness are not more opposite than liberty and the deprivation of the means of being rational.

Who, that loves mankind, is not forry, that any thing is ever published tending to confound men's understandings, mislead their judgments, or deprave their morals? But is there any more likely method for sense to prevail against absurdities, than leaving her at full liberty to paint them in their native colours? Can truth be better armed against error than with the mighty blade of uncontrouled reason? Or virtue more surely triumph over immorality, than by the vigorous execution of the truly wholesome laws purposely framed for her support?

I hate all calumny and defamation, as I hate the corruption of the heart, from which alone it can proceed; and do with the utmost zeal detest those prophaners of liberty, who, pretending to be friends to it, have recourse to such black diabolical methods But I take the laws already in force amongst us, to be a more than sufficient preservative (at least as far as human prudence is able to provide) against all the abusive overt-acts, I am now expressing my abhorrence of: and as such we have reason to esteem them very valuable securities of our liberties and reputations. But because wicked things are published, must there be no publishing? I know it is objected, that there is a medium between an absolute liberty of the press, and an absolute suppression of it. Which I admit; but yet aver the medium (by which either licensing or nothing at all is meant) is far worse on all accounts, than either extreme. For though weare indeed told, that licensers would serve us with wholesome goods, feed us with food convenient for us, and only prevent the distribution of poison; sure fuch cant was never meant to impose on any, but those who are asleep, and cannot see one inch before them. Let no true Briton therefore be deceived by. fuch fallacious speeches, but consider the necessary. consequences which must follow, and he will soon find, that it is the flattering language of the Arange woman [in the Book of Proverbs] who, with her fair smooth tongue, beguileth the simple, and leadeth them as an ox to the flaughter: that plaufible and deceitful language leadeth into the chambers of darkness and death. But this subject is fully handled in the excellent treatife subjoined. I will only propose to the confideration of all lovers of religion, virtue, science and mankind, the few following queries; and every one ought methinks to propose them to himself every day of his life, as making a fundamental catechism. For if the truths, which these contain, are not fundamental, man is not a man, but a beaft; religion and virtue are empty names.

1. What is our most valuable part, or what is it that maketh us capable of religion, virtue, and rational runional happiness? Is it not our reason or underflanding?

[205;]

- z. What then is the noblest privilege that belongs to man? Is it not the free exercise of his understanding, the full use of all the means of advancing in wirtue and knowledge?
- 3. What is it then that is, and must be, the chiest end of government to encourage and promote? Is it not knowledge, virtue and religion?
- 4. And can knowledge; virtue, or religion be promoted, if the only means of promoting them are taken away? For what are the means of promoting them, but the liberty of writing and publishing, without running any risque but that of being resulted or ridiculed, where any thing advanced chances to labour under the just imputation of falshood or absurdity.

ATHOUGHT

ON SEEING RACES ADVERTISED FOR RUNNY-MEAD.

TIME can effect it; whatfoe'er the change, However whimfical, however strange, Experience teaches, that each sleeting hour In time's long roll bears record of his pow'r. That facred place, where Rome with manly sense Warmly harangu'd in liberty's defence; Where eloquence around her thunders hurl'd. And held in awe the conqu'rors of the world: There the sleek heiser, and unyoked steer, In harsh, slow, sullen lowings strike the ear; Where learning's pupils once improv'd their taste, Now sensual gluttony provides his feast.

Thus, in our British annals, do we read, Near Thames's filver waters lies a mead. Where England's barons, bold in freedom's cause, Compell'd their king to ratify her laws: With constancy maintain'd the subject's right, And ferv'd a fov'reign in his own despight. That mead, whereon their honest claims to seal, They risk'd their private, for the public weal; Shame on the age! that once so glorious place Is now the scene of action for — a race; Where fraud successful drains th' unwary purse; And private gain becomes a public curse. Blotted from hist ry, that once hallow'd ground, Shall shine in Walker for its turf renown'd. Time, thou hast made a wond'rous change indeed. A Cow-stall of a Forum-a Course of Runny-mead, . Vicissitudinarius.

EPIGRAM

^{*} The Forum at Rome is now become a Flesh-market.

EPIGRAM

ON THE DEATH OF THE LATE DUKE OF NEWCASTLE.

BY CAPT. THOMSON.

NEWCASTLE dead! confusion seize The wretch who reads it at his ease; Nor dreams what England has to dread, S—t alive, and Pelham dead!

LETTER FROM ABERDEEN.

Marischal College, Aberdeen, 1767. A Very whimsical controversy has arisen lately in our society, which entirely takes up at present the attention of every critic in North-Britain.—It arose from as whimsical a circumstance. An exercise was imposed some time ago in this our college, of which the following line, taken from Sallust's De republica ordinanda, was the theme:

Hæc igitur multitudo, malis moribus Im-buta, parum mibi idonea videtur ad capessendam rempublicam.

The imposition was intended as a punishment, and, therefore, to render it as difficult as possible to a native of North-Britain, it was directed to be wrote in English.—The poor lad, whose task it was unfortunately stumbled at the threshold: for, being but little acquainted with this foreign language, he translated Im-buta into Im-buted; and gave for his reason, that in this place he could find no word in the English tongue so proper—The professor, disgusted at the translation, and enraged at the reason, reported it to the feniors; who, after much altercation, agreed, that the word Im-buted is a very fit and proper translation of Im-buta, whenever that word is used in a bad meaning, such as-Venenis malis Imbuta, Sallust. - Animus Im-butus malis artibus. Idem, &c .- And they determined to fend a deputation from their body to their chancellor, the Earl of B---, to intreat that the word Im buted may be inoculated into the English language: and they submit it to his lordship and the English nation to determine, whether the acceptance of that word shall be dated from his lordship's admittance into Clifden house, or from his accession.

And they humbly pray, that the word may accordingly be inferted in all future editions of the English dictionaries: recommending it particularly to Dr. Johnson, to make use of this short definition of the word Pension — Munus tabo Im-butum.— Hor. Epod. which they presume most applicable at present to the word Pension in general, and to his bwn in particular.

In the mean time, till the fate of this important word is determined, the Royal College of Physicians in Edinburgh, (of which his lordship the Earl of B—— is likewise an honorary member) and all the other learned bodies in this part of the world, are preparing themselves, with the utmost industry, to be ready to take either side of the question, according as his lordship shall determine.

They, who are supposed to be the best judges of this matter, pretend, that the word will certainly be rejected by their chancellor; but accepted with much pleasure by the whole English nation: and they imagine, that on all future occasions, authors will not say, that such a one has possed a youthful mind, but that he has Im-buted a youthful mind. Not that he has instilled into him unconstitutional principles; but that he has Im-buted into him unconstitutional principles. The word Im-buted being much more expressive than insinuated or possed.

They think too, that its use will, for some years to come, be much more extensive in political papers than almost any other in the language; and particularly that, in all future changes of the ministry, instead of the old, improper, and worn-out phrases of resigned and appointed, they will, with much more precision and propriety, say—such a one has been Buted out of, or Im-buted into, this or that hig.

unfortunately stumbled at the threshold: for, being but little acquainted with this foreign language, he translated Im-buta into Im-buted; and gave for his reason, that in this place he could find no word in the English tongue so proper- The professor, disgusted at the translation, and enraged at the reason, reported it to the seniors; who, after much altercation, agreed, that the word Im-buted is a very fit and proper translation of Im-buta, whenever that word is used in a bad meaning, such as-Venenis malis Imbuta, Salluft. - Animus Im-butus malis artibus. Idem, &c .- And they determined to fend a deputation from their body to their chancellor, the Earl of B---, to intreat that the word Im-buted may be inoculated into the English language: and they submit it to his lordship and the English nation to determine, whether the acceptance of that word shall be dated from his lordship's admittance into Clifden house, or from his accession.

And they humbly pray, that the word may accordingly be inferted in all future editions of the English dictionaries: recommending it particularly to Dr. Johnson, to make use of this short definition of the word Pension ——Munus tabo Im-butum.—Hor. Epod. which they presume most applicable at present to the word Pension in general, and to his bwn in particular.

the revenue of England. And, as I cannot learn that they have even had a meeting fince the union, it is with great difficulty that I can procure materials for this my work.

THE CHURCH'S LAMENTATION.

UPON AN ATTEMPT INTENDED TO BE MADE TO REDUCE HER TO A LEVEL, IN POINT OF LAW, WITH THE KING, LORDS, COMMONS, AND EVERY OTHER SUBJECT OF THE REALM.

BY * DR. GARLICK.

ADDRESSED TO THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

A Learned divine,
At the commons great shrine,
Thus offer'd the church's complaint;
True primitive grace
Spread a calm o'er his face,
And his looks spoke the heart of a faint.

• A divine, who had some years ago seen the poor in France eat a great deal of garlick, in consequence of his remark, advised the cultivation of it in a sermon delivered at Bristol, or a neighbouring church; and advised the use of it to the poor in times when wheat was dear, and corn at a high price. For this counsel he was driven out of the city by the populace, and ever after enjoyed the title of Dr. Garlick.

unfortunately stumbled at the threshold: for, being but little acquainted with this foreign language, he translated Im-buta into Im-buted; and gave for his reason, that in this place he could find no word in the English tongue so proper-The professor, disgusted at the translation, and enraged at the reason, reported it to the feniors; who, after much altercation, agreed, that the word Im-buted is a very fit and proper translation of Im-buta, whenever that word is used in a bad meaning, such as-Venenis malis Imbuta, Salluft. - Animus Im-butus malis artibus. Idem, &c .- And they determined to fend a deputation from their body to their chancellor, the Earl of B-, to intreat that the word Im buted may be inoculated into the English language: and they submit it to his lordship and the English nation to determine, whether the acceptance of that word shall be dated from his lordship's admittance into Clifden house, or from his accession.

And they humbly pray, that the word may accordingly be inserted in all future editions of the English dictionaries: recommending it particularly to Dr. Johnson, to make use of this short definition of the word Pension — Munus tabo Im-butum.— Hor. Epod. which they presume most applicable at present to the word Pension in general, and to his bwn in particular.

In the mean time, till the fate of this important word is determined, the Royal College of Physicians in Edinburgh, (of which his lordship the Earl of B—— is likewise an honorary member) and all the other learned bodies in this part of the world, are preparing themselves, with the utmost industry, to be ready to take either side of the question, according as his lordship shall determine.

They, who are supposed to be the best judges of this matter, pretend, that the word will certainly be rejected by their chancellor; but accepted with much pleasure by the whole English nation: and they imagine, that on all suture occasions, authors will not say, that such a one has possoned a youthful mind, but that he has Im-buted a youthful mind. Not that he has instilled into him unconstitutional principles; but that he has Im-buted into him unconstitutional principles. The word Im-buted being much more expressive than insinuated or possoned.

They think too, that its use will, for some years to come, be much more extensive in political papers than almost any other in the language; and particularly that, in all suture changes of the ministry, instead of the old, improper, and worn-out phrases of resigned and appointed, they will, with much more precision and propriety, say—such a one has been Buted out of, or Im-buted into, this or that high office and employment. For it is notorious that, as Cicero fays,

Non do &i, sed fa &i; non instituti, sed Im-buti sunt.

Our northern etymologists discover likewise something very extraordinary in the etymology of this word, which particularly justifies its adoption. For Vossius, Gesner, &c. say—Videtur primo distum esse boc werbum de nutricibus mammam præbentibus, et illius papilla os offercientibus (quad Græce Buen wel Bu Ceness) parworum. And Festus, Im-butum est, quad cujuspiam rei succum bibit: unde infantibus an welint bibere dicentes syllaba Bu, contenti sumus.

Now they pretend that the fyllable Bu is a fort of political Shibboleth amongst you in England; and that state-infants are not permitted, by the great state-nurse, to such the milk of the nation, unless they pronounce this syllable Bu, or B——, distinctly and readily.

For my own part, I take no share in this controversy; for I am at present too deeply engaged in a work, wherein I shall endeavour to investigate the principles, and demonstrate the utility of the establishment of the lords and gentlemen of the police in Scotland, who seceive about 8000s. a year from the

[211]

the revenue of England. And, as I cannot learn that they have even had a meeting fince the union, it is with great difficulty that I can procure materials for this my work.

THE CHURCH'S LAMENTATION.

UPON AN ATTEMPT INTENDED TO BE MADE TO REDUCE HER TO A LEVEL, IN POINT OF LAW, WITH THE KING, LORDS, COMMONS, AND EVERY OTHER SUBJECT OF THE REALM.

BY * DR. GARLICK.

ADDRESSED TO THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

A Learned divine,
At the commons great shrine,
Thus offer'd the church's complaint;
True primitive grace
Spread a calm o'er his face,
And his looks spoke the heart of a faint.

• A divine, who had some years ago seen the poor in France eat a great deal of garlick, in consequence of his remark, advised the cultivation of it in a sermon delivered at Bristol, or a neighbouring church; and advised the use of it to the poor in times when wheat was dear, and corn at a high price. For this counsel he was driven out of the city by the populace, and ever after enjoyed the title of Dr. Garlick.

unfortunately stumbled at the threshold: for, being but little acquainted with this foreign language, he translated Im-buta into Im-buted; and gave for his reason, that in this place he could find no word in the English tongue so proper --- The professor, disgusted at the translation, and enraged at the reason, reported it to the feniors; who, after much altercation, agreed, that the word Im-buted is a very fit and proper translation of Im-buta, whenever that word is used in a bad meaning, such as-Venenis malis Imbuta, Salluft. - Animus Im-butus malis artibus. Idem, &c .- And they determined to fend a deputation from their body to their chancellor, the Earl of B---, to intreat that the word Im buted may be inoculated into the English language: and they submit it to his lordship and the English nation to determine, whether the acceptance of that word shall be dated from his lordship's admittance into Clifden house, or from his accession.

And they humbly pray, that the word may accordingly be inferted in all future editions of the English dictionaries: recommending it particularly to Dr. Johnson, to make use of this short definition of the word Pension — Munus tabo Im-butum.— Hor. Epod. which they presume most applicable at present to the word Pension in general, and to his bwn in particular.

In the mean time, till the fate of this important word is determined, the Royal College of Physicians in Edinburgh, (of which his lordship the Earl of B—— is likewise an honorary member) and all the other learned bodies in this part of the world, are preparing themselves, with the utmost industry, to be ready to take either side of the question, according as his lordship shall determine.

They, who are supposed to be the best judges of this matter, pretend, that the word will certainly be rejected by their chancellor; but accepted with much pleasure by the whole English nation: and they imagine, that on all suture occasions, authors will not say, that such a one has poisoned a youthful mind, but that he has Im-buted a youthful mind. Not that he has instilled into him unconstitutional principles; but that he has Im-buted into him unconstitutional principles. The word Im-buted being much more expressive than insinuated or poisoned.

They think too, that its use will, for some years to come, be much more extensive in political papers than almost any other in the language; and particularly that, in all future changes of the ministry, instead of the old, improper, and worn-out phrases of resigned and appointed, they will, with much more precision and propriety, say—such a one has been Buted out of, or Im-buted into, this or that hig.

high office and employment. For it is notorious that, as Cicero fays,

Non docti, sed facti; non instituti, sed Im-buti sunt.

Our northern etymologists discover likewise something very extraordinary in the etymology of this word, which particularly justifies its adoption. For Vossius, Gesner, &c. say—Videtur primo distum esse boc verbum de nutricibus mammam præbentibus, et illius papilla os offercientibus (quad Græce Buen vel Bu Ceness) parvorum. And Festus, Im-butum est, quad cujuspiam rei succum bibit: unde infantibus an velint bibere dicentes syllaba Bu, contenti sumus.

Now they pretend that the syllable Bu is a fort of political Shibboleth amongst you in England; and that state-infants are not permitted, by the great state-nurse, to such the milk of the nation, unless they pronounce this syllable Bu, or B——, distinctly and readily.

For my own part, I take no share in this controversy; for I am at present too deeply engaged in a work, wherein I shall endeavour to investigate the principles, and demonstrate the utility of the establishment of the lords and gentlemen of the police in Scotland, who receive about 8000s. a year from the

the revenue of England. And, as I cannot learn that they have even had a meeting fince the union, it is with great difficulty that I can procure materials for this my work.

THE CHURCH'S LAMENTATION.

UPON AN ATTEMPT INTENDED TO BE MADE TO REDUCE HER TO A LEVEL, IN POINT OF LAW, WITH THE KING, LORDS, COMMONS, AND EVERY OTHER SUBJECT OF THE REALM.

BY * DR. GARLICK.

ADDRESSED TO THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

A Learned divine,
At the commons great shrine,
Thus offer'd the church's complaint;
True primitive grace
Spread a calm o'er his face,
And his looks spoke the heart of a faint.

• A divine, who had some years ago seen the poor in France eat a great deal of garlick, in consequence of his remark, advised the cultivation of it in a sermon delivered at Bristol, or a neighbouring church; and advised the use of it to the poor in times when wheat was dear, and corn at a high price. For this counsel he was driven out of the city by the populace, and ever after enjoyed the title of Dr. Garlick.

O fons wife and great,
Sent to watch o'er the flate,
Who never leave griefs in the lurch,
Who have powers express,
To make laws and redress,
In pity consider the church.

Confider her age,
And the truths from her page,
Which have flow'd fince the great fin of Eve;
Confider her cares
For the poor, and her pray'rs,
And leave her not hopeless to grieve.

O think heretofore
She had plenty in store,
To clothe and solace the poor stranger;
Poor widows she fed,
Poor guests found a bed,
And their asses eat hay at her manger.

'Twas then she made laws,
To support her own cause,
And save her from laymen's soul play;
Her great plea of time
Was ne'er felt as a crime,
But flood like a rock till to day.

[213]

But now that sweet scene, So bless'd, so serene, Like a vision delusive is past! Farewell gentle peace, Law, glory, increase, The Church's bright day's overcast!

No coffer well lin'd
(That content to her mind)
Exhibits the means to relieve:
No stranger, no poor,
Ever enter her door,
For, alas! she has nothing to give.

Her tithes are neglected,
Her fons are dejected,
But fuffer with mecknoss of spirit;
Forgive their abusers,
Do good to accusers,
For that is the true line of merit.

No more mild and fleek,
Joy dimples their cheek,
And calms the warm zeal of their foul;
But meagre and pale
They flart, flamp and rail,
At the thoughts of an human controul.

Provisions

Provisions are dear,
And the modes of the year

Demand a conformity there;
Their wives must go clean,
And their daughters be seen,

Or the church may perhaps want an heir.

Yet in this forry flate,
So uncourteous is fate,
They are doom'd to a still lower fall:
For a Papist, or Jew,
(If relation says true)
Is forming a plot to take all.

A plot which intends,
For unjust wicked ends,
To level the church with the law;
To bring facred things
To the level of kings,
And her curtain of night to undraw.

To you in this cafe,
The true guardians of grace,
She humbly addresses her suit;
'Tis you must be friend her,
The church's desender,
When hereticks grasp at her fruit.

OR THE YEAR 1776.

BY W. WHITEHEAD, POET LAUREAT.

ON the white rocks which guard her coast, Observant of the parting day, Whose orb was half in ocean lost. Reclin'd Britannia lay.

Wide o'er the wat'ry waste

A penfive look she cast;

And scarce could check the rising sigh, And scarce could stop the tear which trembled in her

"Sheathe, sheathe the fword, which thirsts for blood, (She cry'd) deceiv'd mistaken men!

Nor let your parent, o'er the flood,

Send forth her voice in vain!

Alas! no tyrant she,

She courts you to be free:

Submissive hear her soft command,

Nor force unwilling vengeance from a parent's hand."

Hear her ye wise, to duty true,

And teach the rest to feel;

Nor let the madness of a sew

Distress the public weal!

So shall the opening year assume, Time's fairest child, a happier bloom;

The

216

The white wing'd hours shall lightly moves
The sun with added lustre shine!—
"To err is human"—Let us prove
"Forgiveness is divine!"——

ANOTHER QUE FOR 1776.

I.

ON the green banks which guard her strand,
Regardful of the rising day,
Whose radiant orb illum'd her land,
America reclining lay.
Far o'er the boist rous main!
Her aching eye-balls strain;
Yet she disdain'd to beave a single sigh,
Or drop a single tear from her enraged eye.

II.

"In vain, the cry'd, the tword we wield.
Ye poor, deceiv'd, missaken men!
Old freedom's fons diffain to yield,
Tho' they have fued in vain!
In truth no rebels we,
Who live but to be free;
Who ne'er deny'd your mild command,
But fcorn to fink beneath your wrathful band.

[219]

THE LUNATIC

COME here to me, ye fighting fools! Here bend your course!—Attend my rules: Ye, who mighty wars maintain: I've all the wars of Europe in my brain.

See me, fee me foar on high!
See me reach the azure sky!
Hear me the Celestials hail!
With fifty thousand Yankies at my tail.
See how briskly we put on!
Marching thro' the Torrid Zone!

To florm Jove's temples, put the Gods to flight, And fruff the candles of eternal light.

How obedient to my nod,

Each martial hero flying!——
Enthron'd I'll be!—each trembling God

An humble victim lying.

Let the globe dance a hornpipe!—Here! Washington! Howe!

Brother madmen!—attend me!—I'll whifper ye

Let's climb you mount so high,
And there disturb the weather;
Pull down the rainbow from the sky,
And tie both ends together.

unfortunately stumbled at the threshold: for, being but little acquainted with this foreign language, he translated Im-buta into Im-buted; and gave for his reason, that in this place he could find no word in the English tongue so proper - The professor, disgusted at the translation, and enraged at the reason, reported it to the feniors; who, after much altercation, agreed, that the word Im-buted is a very fit and proper translation of Im-buta, whenever that word is used in a bad meaning, such as-Venenis malis Imbuta, Salluft. - Animus Im-butus malis artibus. Idem, &c.-And they determined to fend a deputation from their body to their chancellor, the Earl of B---, to intreat that the word Im buted may be inoculated into the English language: and they submit it to his lordship and the English nation to determine, whether the acceptance of that word shall be dated from his lordship's admittance into Clifden house, or from his accession.

And they humbly pray, that the word may accordingly be inserted in all future editions of the English distinuaries: recommending it particularly to Dr. Johnson, to make use of this short definition of the word Pension — Munus tabo Im-butum.— Hor. Epod. which they presume most applicable at present to the word Pension in general, and to his bwn in particular.

In the mean time, till the fate of this important word is determined, the Royal College of Physicians in Edinburgh, (of which his lordship the Earl of B—— is likewise an honorary member) and all the other learned bodies in this part of the world, are preparing themselves, with the utmost industry, to be ready to take either side of the question, according as his lordship shall determine.

They, who are supposed to be the best judges of this matter, pretend, that the word will certainly be rejected by their chancellor; but accepted with much pleasure by the whole English nation: and they imagine, that on all suture occasions, authors will not say, that such a one has possoned a youthful mind, but that he has Im-buted a youthful mind. Not that he has instilled into him unconstitutional principles; but that he has Im-buted into him unconstitutional principles. The word Im-buted being much more expressive than insinuated or possoned.

They think too, that its use will, for some years to come, be much more extensive in political papers than almost any other in the language; and particularly that, in all future changes of the ministry, instead of the old, improper, and worn-out phrases of resigned and appointed, they will, with much more precision and propriety, say—such a one has been Buted out of, or Im-buted into, this or that

1 220]

To commemorate the Naval Review at Portsmouth, the Oratorio of Alexander's Feast is to be performed at one of the Theatres Royal, by command of his ————, with the following alterations, by W——— W———, Esq; Poet L———t.

ALEXANDER'S FEAST, PARODIED; OR, THE GRAND PORTSMOUTH PUPPET-SHEW.

ACT THE FIRST.

RECITATIVE.

TWAS at the royal show, and grand display
Of all the navy which at Portsmouth lay;
Alost in laughing state,
B—'s monarch sat,

And look'd ferenely gay.

Goldflick, and other peers were plac'd around,

Their hair in bags or filken ribbons bound;

So should, ye fair, our men of arms be crown'd!

Charlotte smil'd sweetly at his side,

Yet inwardly, alas! she sigh'd

At G——'s folly, and at Twitcher's pride.

A I R.

Happy, happy, happy pair,

How they rejoice!

How they rejoice!

To see the weather grown so fair!

Chorus, and the same.

RECI-

the revenue of England. And, as I cannot learn that they have even had a meeting fince the union, it is with great difficulty that I can procure materials for this my work.

THE CHURCH'S LAMENTATION.

UPON AN ATTEMPT INTENDED TO BE MADE TO REDUCE HER TO A LEVEL, IN POINT OF LAW, WITH THE KING, LORDS, COMMONS, AND EVERY OTHER SUBJECT OF THE REALM.

BY * DR. GARLICK.

ADDRESSED TO THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

A Learned divine,
At the commons great shrine,
Thus offer'd the church's complaint;
True primitive grace
Spread a calm o'er his face,
And his looks spoke the heart of a faint.

• A divine, who had fome years ago feen the poor in France eat a great deal of garlick, in confequence of his remark, advised the cultivation of it in a fermon delivered at Bristol, or a neighbouring church; and advised the use of it to the poor in times when wheat was dear, and corn at a high price. For this counsel he was driven out of the city by the populace, and ever after enjoyed the title of Dr. Garlick.

[224]

RECITATIVE.

But Sandwich, tho' with vaft furprize, He faw the monarch's weeping eyes, Told him it would not be amifs—

46 The more he cry'd, the less he'd ———!

R E C I T. [accompanied.] Softly sweet in Scottish measures, The bagpipe soothes his soul to pleasures.

A I R

War, he fung, is toil and trouble,
Honour but an empty bubble;
Ease and comfort still refusing;
Fighting still, and still destroying:
Though a crown be worth thy losing,
Turning buttons worth enjoying.
Bute soon again shall sit beside thee;
Take the friends the Scots provide thee.

War he fung, &c. repeated again.

CHORUS.

Glad Sawney rends the skies with loud applause; So B—e was crown'd, and England won the cause.

A I R.

The Prince, his joy unable to contain, Sigh'd for the Thane, Who caus'd his pain, And figh'd and look'd, figh'd and look'd, Sigh'd and look'd, and figh'd again. At length, with failing and with finging tir'd, Home to his bed the drowfy King retir'd.

C H O R U S repeated.

Glad Sawney rends the skies with load applause; So B—e was crown'd, and Scotland was the cause.

[End of the First Act.]

ACT THE SECOND.

RECITATIVE. [accompanied.]
Now strike the kettle-drums again,
A louder yet—and yet a louder strain!
Break his bands of sleep asunder,

And rouse him with salutes as loud as thunder.

CHORUS.

Break, &c.

RECITATIVE.

Hark, hark! the martial found

Has rais'd up his head

After sh-g a bed,

And amaz'd he stares around.

A I R.

Revenge, revenge, bold Sandwich cries, See the Furies arise;

L₃

See the snakes that they rear, How they his in their hair, And the sparkles that flash from their eyes.

A I R.

Behold a mournful band
Without arms in their hand!
These are British troops, that in battle were ta'en,
And captive remain
Beyond th' Atlantic main.

RECIT. [accompanied.]

Give the vengeance due
To Burgoyne's injur'd crew—
Behold how they pile up their arms all on high,
How they point to the army of Gates,
And dine in dumb despair off * broken plates!

A I R

The nobles applaud with a furious frown,

And the K-g with a tom hawk wou'd fain knock them down.

After the capitulation, General Burgoyne, and his principal officers, dined with General Gates, a description of which entertainment, and the table furniture, appeared some time ago in the public papers.

Camp-

[219]

THE LUNATIC.

COME here to me, ye fighting fools! Here bend your course!—Attend my rules: Ye, who mighty wars maintain: I've all the wars of Europe in my brain.

See me, fee me foar on high!
See me reach the azure sky!
Hear me the Celestials hail!
With sifty thousand Yankies at my tail.
See how briskly we put on!
Marching thro' the Torrid Zone!

To florm Jove's temples, put the Gods to flight, And snuff the candles of eternal light.

How obedient to my nod,

Each martial hero flying!

Enthron'd I'll be!—each trembling God

An humble victim lying.

Let the globe dance a hornpipe!-Here! Washington! Howe!

Brother madmen!-attend me!-I'll whisper ye now:---

Let's climb you mount so high,
And there disturb the weather;
Pull down the rainbow from the sky,
And tie both ends together.

A PANEGYRIC

HAIL! minister, by paradoxes great!

Proceeds it from thy genius or thy fate?

Courtier compleat, with manners most polite;

Without thy Prince's love a favourite;

Not eloquent, tho' voluble of tongue,

And thy first honours from corruption sprung;

From ruin and distress advanc'd to power,

From gaol to court, the creature of an hour:

Hated by each and yet upheld by all;

Hooted in streets, applauded in the hall;

By giving rich, sill able to supply

Fresh credit for each want and every lye;

French insults, pad-lock'd swords, and tame campaigns,

(Thy measures now) were crimes in former reigns;
What then was construed treason by our laws,
Is now thy glory, and demands applause:
If then art easy, who dares feel his pain?
Tis bold to sigh, rebellion to complain;—
Ev'n public debts transform themselves to gain.
The change that seem'd to force thee from the stage,
To sue for shelter from the people's rage,
Pye-ball'd with dirt and glory, brought thee on,
And turn'd thy sanctuary to a throne.

[219]

THE LUNATIC

COME here to me, ye fighting fools! Here bend your course!—Attend my rules: Ye, who mighty wars maintain: I've all the wars of Europe in my brain.

See me, fee me foar on high!
See me reach the azure sky!
Hear me the Celestials hail!
With sifty thousand Yankies at my tail.
See how briskly we put on!
Marching thro' the Torrid Zone!

To florm Jove's temples, put the Gods to flight, And snuff the candles of eternal light.

How obedient to my nod,

Each martial hero flying!——
Enthron'd I'll be!—each trembling God

An humble victim lying.

Let the globe dance a hornpipe!—Here! Washington! Howe!

Brother madmen!—attend me!—I'll whisper ye

Let's climb you mount so high,
And there disturb the weather;
Pull down the rainbow from the sky,
And tie both ends together.

[232]

SEVENTEEN HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-TWO.

OR A SESTCH OF THE TIMES :

AN ODB

ADDRESSED TO SIR JAMES LOWTHER, BARONET.

O decus Phæbi & dapibus supremi Grata testudo Jovis, ô laborum Dulce lenimen, mihi cunque salve, Ritè vocanti, Hos.

FOR Lowther weave the wreath of fame!

Let ages hence record his name,

His liberal spirit own;

—All Paris gilds one gaudy bark,

Pour plaire aux dames, et Grand Monarque

But Lowther builds alone!

Proceed, Sir Knight—to scare our foes, But don't the Irish Earl oppose,

That Premier of all schemers!
And, ere your seventy-sour you dip,
You'll get a star to guide your ship,

-Blue Ribband for the fireamers!

Sing muse the men—proud Albion's boast!
Who ope their purse to guard our coast,

And fave the land from plunder;

—That France and Spain, with dread furprise,
May see a glerious navy rise,

To make all Europe wonder.

Great

Great Sm—th his Viz'ray coin displays,
Compounding rupees R—mb—ld pays,
(The Advocate is dumb:)
Twitcher's old board will purchase slips,
H-rl-y and Co. subscribe for ships,
And Atk-nf-n for rum!

Even crosser'd M—rk—m drops his mite,
Nay, H—rtf—rd lends one guines (light).
At gentle Conw—y's pressing;
Newcastle grants a whole week's sees,
And Scotia's fixteen—all their trees,
The loyal kirk—their blessing.

† A time-keeper gives Rich—nd's grace,
Which measur'd rapid Sackville's pace,
At Minden battle's din;
—Sword—pistols too! (as ordnance store)
And to enhance the present more,
By R—wd—n sends them in.

The

- A peculiar species of oriental coimage, (much above the common standard, in which the East-India Company's troops are usually paid.——For a particular explanation of this valuable coin, vide Major Scott's pamphlet.
- † This identical watch has been tried against Mr. Herrison's improved Time keeper, and was found much superior. On Lord Carmarthen's motion to degrade Lord S——lie from the rank

The gallant R—dn—y won't refuse,
Who drubb'd the French—and speil'd the Jews,
And brought us home such riches;
—Now Mynheers groan on 'Statia's shore,
Bare rump'd (as Graham's bonny corps)
Since V—ugh—n fold their breeches.

Tho' England's sun sinks in the socket,

Sh—b—ne has * twilight—in his pocket,

To renovate it's rays;

—America will hug his chain,

Her independence will distain,

And bless her brighter days.

rank of peerage, his Grace observed, "had I been examined as "a witness, I would have removed a difficulty which from the day of his trial till the present hour continued unexplained; this was the point of time between Prince Ferdinand's have ing sent an order to the noble Lord to advance with the cadvalry and its arrival; as I had my watch in my hand the "whola time, and particularly knew that the time was one hour and an half."

This metaphorical expression, so beautiful in poetry, and true in philosophy, the author has borrowed from one of the Earl of Sh-lb--ne's sublime orations.--" I would," faid his Lordship, (after prophecying that England's sun would set for ever if independence was granted to America) " keep up a " little twilight to light up another---and another---and another---and another---and

The

The Spaniard roars for his old rib,

But Eliott padlocks Donna Gib,

And swears he ne'er shall kiss her;

-Yet as she only swells our debts,

Since Twitcher shew'd her naked Streights,

Some think---we scarce should miss her,

From Eastern climes come peace and joy,
Where once we bled for Ragaboy,
Whose virtues shine in story!
—Tremendous Hyder slies our coast,
Stuart (unscar'd by Pigot's ghost)
Revives Old England's glory.

Why in the land of faints this riot?
Why, Paddy, will you not be quiet?
Let Flood your Charter shape;
—Britannia means to give you blifs,
Then prithee wait the willing kifs,
And don't commit a rape.

On peace and fencibles rely,
And Sh-lb—ne's word (a facred tye!)

Which made his tenants merry:

No petty arts debase his mind,
For honour's-self his leases sign'd,

Ak---volunteers of Kerry.

• See an admirable and unanswerable desence of the Earl of Shelburge, &c. printed by Debrett, p. 35.

What What wild commotions shake our age!
Religion's storm—then party's rage;
—A dead calm of a sudden!
Each season shoots out something new;
Alarms we' must have, false or true,
Or John can't eat his pudden.

Bibles we faw crown G-rd-n's head,

Mad treason fire her M-ns—ld's bed;

Lords—Commons—foldiers gaze!

Thro' every fireet No Popery rings,

Whilst pious Wilkes, like Simeon, sings,

To see the King's Bench blaze!

Ah, where was mighty Cæsar then?

The best of kings---the best of men,
With legs all arm'd in seather;
Tho' round him Franklin's fire-balls slew,
Hyde Park---St. James's saw him too.
On horseback in hot weather!!

Am-rst, who joys in dire alarms,
Step'd forth; --- beef-eaters flew to arms,
And Hotspur Jeff grew vain:

-- The guards he lodg'd in King's-Place stews,
In Pudding Alley, the Horse Blues;

-- His post--- Blow-bladder Lang.

وفلكي وأفرار الرار

From courtiers * burst those staming ills;
And Patriots, brib'd by Congress bills,
Were ripe for revolution!

—A spell at length a Scotch † witch threw;
The army, constables all grew,
And sav'd the Constitution.

Now, for more Knights each county cries? As those they have a'n't very wise,

The canfe of all our forrows;
This point Old Sarum's Pitt will touch,
Whilft young Will'nerlights his father's crutch
To fire the rotten Boroughs.

But lest state enclisers should squeak, ... Let Sh lb—ne save the state, and bresk

Th' ungrateful Dutch, confound them!

—As reynard wife, he'll trick such fore,

Who lur'd the fleas up to his note,

Then took a plunge and drown'd them.

Fitzmaurice still shall grace my lays, No dupe, like North, to public praise,

Lord Shelburne proved this beyond a possibility of doubt in his excellent speech on that occasion.

† Lord Mansfield's doctrine, that every foldier, by the common law of England, has a right to use his musket and bayonet for the preservation of the peace, any thing therein contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding.

Parts ---

Parts --honour---wit---miscarry s Low at his feet kneel Fox and Burke, Whilst Dund-s shakes his brazen dirk, And shings his targe o'er Barré *.

THE HEN AND THE GOLDEN EGGS, A FABLE.

ADDRESSED TO THE MINISTER.

HAD Æsop been living, what mortal so able
To write your Gazettes? as he dealt much in fable:
Yet tho' he is dead, he can be your adviser --Read one of his fables, 'twill make you much wiser.

A hen, we are told,

Laid an egg that was gold

Each day to her miftrefs and mafter;

But the cormorant crew

Thought one egg too few,

So they figh'd that she did not lay faster.

Their hearts were form'd of ministerial steel;

They had no feeling but what hands can feel.

With shame I must tell ye,
They ripp'd up her belly,
To riste a mine sull of ore;
But the hen being dead,
It need not be said,
They sound that she could not lay more.

[•] Ut pictura poefis, --- A print of this spirited attack will be speedily published.

[239]

The force of this fable, and its application, Is felt by your Lordship, as well as the nation; Neither you nor your gang, I am sure, need be told, That America yielded her tribute of gold.

> Had you liften'd to Penn, And foster'd your hen,

What regular wealth would have flow'd from her then!

But your ravenous crew, Not content with their due,

Destroy'd the poor bird where for refuge she siew. The muse from your folly this consequence gathers:

Those who murder'd the fowl, will be choak'd with the feathers.

c. w.

AMERICAN BPIGRAM.

S OME mice deep intrench'd in a rich Cheshire cheese, Grimalkin long wish'd to devour;
Secure, from their numbers, they liv'd at their ease,
And bravely desied all his power.

In vain all the day he fat watching their holes, All his tricks and his force were in vain; Each effort convinc'd him the vermin had fouls, Determin'd their cheese to maintain.

* From a Boston news-paper, printed in October, 1775.

Grimalkin,

Grimalkin, deep vers'd in political schools, Affected the fiege to give o'er, Supposing the mice were such ignorant fools, They would venture abroad as before.

But as he retreated, a spirited mouse, Whom time had bedappl'd with grey Cry'd, "All your finesse we don't value a sous, " No more to your cunning a prey.

- "This cheefe by possession we claim as our own,
- Fair Freedom the claim doth approve;
- "Our wants are but few, and her bleffings alone Soficient those wants to remove.
- " No cas will we own, with ambition mun mad, " For our King ____ fo move off in a trice; es If we find, from experience, a King must be had

' That King shall be chose by the Mice."

[To the Tune of Hearts of Oak.]

I.

COME listen, my cocks, to a brother and friend; One and all to my fong, gallant failors, attend: Sons of freedom ourselves, let's be just as we're brave, Nor America's freedom attempt to enflave.

Chorus,

[241]

Chorus.

Firm as oak are our hearts, when true glory depends:
Steady boys, steady,
We will always be ready,

To fight all our foes, not to murder our friends.

II.

True glory can ne'er in this quarrel be won;
If New England we conquer, Old England's undone;
On our brethren then why attempt to fix chains?
For the Blood of Great Britain flows warm in their veins.

Chorus.

Firm as oak, &c.

III.

Shall courfiers fine speeches prevail to divide
Our affections from those who have fought by our side;
And who often have join'd us to fink in the main,
The proud-boasting navies of France and of Spain?
Chorus,

Firm as oak, &c.

IV.

For that Ad—ty L—d Jemmy Twitcher, who cares!

Let him practice his catches, impose on his peers;

The

The time is at hand, his own doctrine to teach, By woeful experience, what 'tis for to 'peach. Chorus.

Firm as oak, &c.

V.

Near relations of some who at court now do thrive,
The Pretender did join in the year forty-five;
And many in favour, disguis'd with high names,
While they roar out for George, in their hearts are for James.

Chorus.

Firm as cak, &c.

VI.

Of such men as these let us from to be tools,
Dirty work to perform; do they take us for fools?
Brave sailors know better than thus to be bamm'd;
Let 'em turn out themselves, lads, and sight and be d——d.

Chorus.

Firm as oak, &c.

VII.

To the ground may dispute with our Colonies fall, And George long in splendour reign king of us all;

And

[243]

And may those who would set the two lands by the ears,

Be put in the bilboes, and brought to the jeers. Chorus.

Firm as oak, &c.

ANEXTEMPORE

EPIGRAMMATIC QUESTION: TO WHICH AN

ANSWER IS DESIRED.

WHEN George shall o'er America succeed, Won't George then be a-merry k- indeed? By Q in the corner.

EPIGRAM

ON SIR PETER PARKER'S WOUND ORF SULLIVAN'S

Si verè dixit Hudibras, " quod podice honos est;"
Consequitur, Petrus nihil honoris habet.

If "honour in the breech is lodg'd,"
As Hudibras hath shewn,
It may from hence be fairly judg'd
Sir Peter's honour's gone.

LLGY

ON THE DEATH OF BRIGADIER GENERAL MERCER, OF VIRGINIA, SLAIN IN THE ACTION NEAR PRINCETON, JANUARY 3, 1777.

Et generis jactatus hones, dominatio regum, Quicquid opes, quicquid forma dedere honi, Supremam fimul hanc expectant omnia noctem: Scilicet ad Lethum ducit honoris iter.

ANOTHER patriot claims the votive strain,
Fresh laurels spring around the honour'd herse:
Lamented Mercer, erst in battle slain,
Be thine the off'ring of my artless verse.

'Tis nature bids the manly tear to flow, In rich oblations o'er the closing urn; Guiltless of art, unusual feelings glow, And hard'med chiefs involuntary mourn.

But fay—what cause—from sweet domestic ease, Call'd forth the patriot to the doubtful strife; From scenes where affluence lavish'd all to please— The fondling infant, and the tender wise?

Dura sed emovere loco me tempora grato,
 Civilisque rudem belli tulit æstus in arma.

The

Those fost endearments are, alas—no more;
No kindred tie his willing step detains;
Resolv'd, he leaves Virginia's friendly shore,
To guard the soil, where heav'n-born freedom reigns.

The naked Indian, or the wily Gaul;
The painted favage, and the untutor'd band;
On those no more his angry weapons fall.

A soe more savage dares his chast ning hand.

Now Sol up-rifing gilds the diffant spire,
Paints the dun umbrage of the western wood;
O'er haples Princeton sheds his genial fire,
Rousing the Briton to new scenes of blood.

Loud founds the martial trumper from afar,

The watchful cavalry invest the ground;

The beat of drums proclaims th' approaching war,

Whilst frighted heralds bear the tidings round.

The distant hills on each horizon blaze

With polish'd arms, and troops in vast parade;

No ling'ring terror either host delays,

To meet the soe in hostile pomp array'd.

Intrepid Mercer leads th'embattled van,

His great example ev'ry soldier fires;

Thro'out the deep'ning line from man to man,

The pulse of glory ev'ry break inspires.

Vol. IV. M Swift

Swift on the foe, the dauntless warrior springs,
Braves the loud cannon's desolating force;
Dares the grim terrors of their circling wings,
And strews the field with many a bleeding corse.

But pierc'd he falls, he welters on the ground;
The ruffian foe rejoice with favage cries;
While recking bay'nets blush from wound to wound,
Stabbing the hero, as he vanquish'd lies.

A corps referv'd (tho' panting for the deed)
Indignant view'd the tragic scene from far;
Onward they furious rush'd with vengeful speed,
Ply'd the loud cannon, and renew'd the war.

Forc'd from their murd'ring work, the villains fly, In broken columns, o'er the bloody field; Some breathless faint, some maim'd expiring lie, While others trembling to the victors yield.

In vain they shun the vengeance of our arms,
In vain the terrors of the war decline;
The grateful chace each patriot bosom warms,
And show'rs destruction on their routed line.

Revenge appeas'd with ample vict'ry crown'd,
For Mercer mangled and for Haselet slain,
Sees Britain's miscreants strew the purpled ground,
A grateful off'ring on the well fought plain.

[247]

Now, what was virtue (which the just admire) Soul of the patriet, instinct of the brave; Quench'd is that spark that fed the genial fire, And Mercer slumbers in the peaceful grave.

Olympus' tow'ring heights, those blest abodes, Where freedom sheds her fair auspicious ray, Glorious he seeks, and, mix'd with kindred gods, Breathes the pure æther of eternal day.

Philadelphia, Jan. 31, 1777.

THE RISING GLORY OF AMERICA.

NO more of Memphis and her mighty kings, Or Alexandria, where the Ptolemies
Taught golden commerce to unfurl her fails, And bid fair science smile: no more of Greece, Where learning next her early visit paid, And spread her glories to illume the world——No more of Athens, where she flourished, And saw her sons of mighty genius rise——Smooth-slowing Plato, Socrates, and him Who with resistless eloquence reviv'd
The spirit of Liberty, and shook the thrones Of Macedon and Persia's haughty kings—No more of Rome, enlighten'd by her beams, Fresh kindling there the sire of eloquence
And poesy divine, imperial Rome!

M 2

Whole

[247]

Now, what was virtue (which the just admire)
Soul of the patriot, instinct of the brave;
Quench'd is that spark that fed the genial fire,
And Mercer slumbers in the peaceful grave.

Olympus' tow'ring heights, those blest abodes, Where freedom sheds her fair auspicious ray, Glorious he seeks, and, mix'd with kindred gods, Breathes the pure æther of eternal day.

Philadelphia, Jan. 31, 1777.

THE RISING GLORY OF AMERICA.

NO more of Memphis and her mighty kings,
Or Alexandria, where the Ptolemies
Taught golden commerce to unfurl her fails,
And bid fair science smile: no more of Greece,
Where learning next her early visit paid,
and spread her glories to illume the world—
more of Athens, where she flourished, her sons of mighty genius rise—
ing Plato, Socrates, and him

Al seloquence reviv'd ty, and shook the thrones ia's haughty kings——

ighten'd by her beams, fire of eloquence
il Rome!

Whose wide dominion reach'd o'er half, the globe; Whose eagle flew o'er Ganges to the east, And in the west far to the British isles-No more of Britain and her kings renown'd, Edwards and Henrys, thunderbolts of war; Her chiefs victious o'er the Gallic foe; Illustrious senators, immortal bards, And wife philosophers, of these no more: A theme more new, tho' not less noble, claims Our ev'ry thought on this auspicious day, The rifing glory of this western world, Where now the dawning light of science spreads Her orient ray, and wakes the muse's song; Where freedom holds her facred standard high, And commerce rolls her golden tides profuse Of elegance, and ev'ry joy of life.

Now thro' the veil of ancient days review
The period fam'd, when first Columbus touch'd
The shore so long unknown; thro' various toils.
Famine and death, the hero made his way,
Fam'd Cabot too may claim our noblest song,
Who from th' Atlantic surge descry'd these shores,
As he coasted from the Mexic bay
To Acady, and piny Labradore.
Nor less than him the muse would celebrate
Bold Hudson, stemming to the Pole, thro' seas
Vex'd with continual storms, thro' the cold straits,
Where

Where Europe and America oppose Their shores contiguous, and the northern rea Confin'd, indignant, fwells and roars between. With these be number'd in the list of fame Illustrious Raleigh, hapless in his fate: Forgive me, Raleigh, if an infant muse Borrows thy name to grace her humble strain; By many nobler are thy virtues fung: Envy no more shall throw them in the shade 4 They pour new luftre on Britannia's isle. Thou too, advent'rous on th' Atlantic main, Burst thro' its storms, and fair Virginia hail'd. The simple natives saw thy canvas flow, And gaz'd aloof upon the shady shore: For in her woods America contain'd. From times remote, a favage race of men. Shut from the light of science and of truth They wander'd blindfold down the steep of time; Far from the reach of fame they liv'd unknown, In liftless slumber and inglorious ease; To them fair science never op'd her stores, Nor facred truth fublim'd the foul to God; No fix'd abode their wand'ring genius knew, No golden harvest crown'd the fertile glebe; No city then adorn'd the river's bank, Nor rifing turret overlook'd the stream. Now view the prospect chang'd; far off at sea The mariner descries our spacious towns;

He hails the prospect of the land, and views A new, a fair, a fertile world arife. But hear, my friends, and let us trace the steps By which this recent happy world arose To this fair eminence of high renown, This height of wealth, of liberty and fame. -By perfecution wrong'd, And Popish cruelty, our fathers came From Europe's shores to find this blest retreat, Secure from tyranny and hateful man. For this they left their country and their friends, And plough'd th'Atlantic waves in quest of peace; Sought out uncultivated tracks and wilds, And fram'd new plans of cities, governments, And spacious provinces: why should I name Thee, Penn, the Solon of our western lands? Sagacious legislator, whom the world Admires, tho' dead: an infant colony, Nurs'd by thy care, now rifes o'er the rest, Like that tall pyramid on Memphis' strand O'er all the lesser piles, they also great. Why should I name those heroes so well known, Who peopled all the rest from Canada To Georgia's further coasts, West Florida, Or Apalachian mountains? Yet Indian tribes, With deadly malice arm'd, and black defign, Oft murder'd half the hapless colonies. What heart but mourns the untimely fate of Wolfe,

Who

Who dying conquer'd, or he who bravely fell By Monangahela and the Ohio's stream! What could avail, O Braddock, then the flame, The gen'rous flame which fir'd thy martial foul! What could avail Britannia's warlike troops, Choice spirits of her isle? What could avail America's own forts? The skulking foe Hid in the forest lay, and fought secure. What could the brave Virginians do, o'er power'd By fuch vast numbers, and their leader dead! 'Midst fire and death they bore him from the field, Where in his blood full many a hero lay. 'Twas there, O Halket, thou so nobly fell! Thrice valiant Halket, early fon of fame! But why, alas, commemorate the dead! And pass those glorious heroes by, who yes Breathe the same air, and see the light with us? A Washington now lives, among the sons Of fame well known, bright as the morning flar Among the lesser lights; a patriot skill'd In all the glorious arts of peace and war. -Enough of war; more noble riches flow From agriculture, and th' industrious swain Who tills the fertile vale, or mountain's brow; Nor less from golden commerce flow the streams Of richest plenty on our smiling land. Far to the East our fleets on traffic sail, And to the West, thro' boundless seas, which not Old Rome, nor Tyre, nor mightier Carthage knew. Daughter of Commerce, from the hoary deep New-York emerging, rears her lofty domes, And hails from far her num'rous ships of trade, Like shady forests rising on the waves. And Philadelphia, mistress of our world, The feat of arts, of science, and of same, Derives her grandent from the pow'r of trade. Hail, happy city! where the Muses stray, Where deep philosophy convenes her fons, And opens all her secrets to their view! America! O happy land! the lat, The best of countries, where the arts shall rife, And grow luxuriant: for ev'n now we boast A Franklin, skill'd in deep philosophy; A genius piereing as th'electric fire, Bright as the light'ning's fieth explain'd so well By him, the rival of Britannia's tage. This is a land where the more noble light Of holy revelation beams; the flar Which rose from Judah lights our skies: we feel Its influence, as once did Peleftine And Gentile lands, where now the ruthless Turk, Wrapt up in darkness, sleeps dull life away. "Tis true, no human oye can penduate The veil obscure, and in fair light disclosed Behold the fcenes of dark futurity: You if we realon from the dourse of things,

And downward trace the vestiges of time. The mind prophetic grows, and pierces far Thro' ages yet unborn. We saw the states And mighty empires of the East arise, In swift succession from the Assyrian To Macedon and Rome: in Britain thence Dominion drove her car; she stretch'd her reign O'er many isles, wide seas, and peopled lands. Now, in the West, a continent appears; A newer world now opens to her view; She hastens onward to th' Americ shores, And bids a scene of recent wonders rise: New states, new empires, and a race of men High rais'd in glory; cities and people Num'rous as fand upon the ocean shore. Th' Ohio then shall glide by many a town Of note; and where the Missisppi stream, By forests shaded, now runs weeping on, Nations shall grow, and states not less in fame Than Greece and Rome of old: we too shall boast Our Alexanders, Pompeys, heroes That in the womb of time yet dormant lie, Waiting the joyful hour for life and light. Far in the Arctic skies a Petersburgh, A Bergen, or Archangel lifts its spires Glitt'ring with ice; far in the West appears A new Palmyra or an Ecbatan; And in the South I fee a Babylon,

M 5

A Nineveh

A Nineveh where Oronoque descends With waves discolour'd from the Andes high, Winding himfelf around an hundred isles, Where splendid buildings glitter o'er his tide. To mighty nations shall the people grow, Who cultivate the banks of many a flood, In crystal currents poured from the hills Call'd Apalachio, to lave the fands Of Carolina, Georgia, and the plains Stretch'd out from thence far to the burning line, St. John's, or Clarendon, or Albemarle. And thou, Potowmack, navigable ftream, Rolling thy waters thro' Virginia's groves, Shall vie with Thames, the Tiber, or the Rhine; For on thy banks I see an hundred towns. And the tall vessels wasted down thy tide; Hoarse Niagara's stream, now roaring on Thro' woods and rocks, and broken mountains torn In days remote far from their ancient beds, By fome great monarch taught a better course, Or clear'd of cataracts, shall flow beneath Unnumber'd boats, and merchandize and men: And from the coasts of piny Labradore, A thousand navies crowd before the gale, And spread their commerce to remotest lands, Or bear their thunder round the conquer'd world.

[255]

And here fair freedom shall for ever reign.

I see a train, a glorious train appear,
Of patriots plac'd in equal same with those
Who nobly sell for Athens or for Rome;
The sons of Boston, resolute and brave,
Who, when their country's cause shall need, when some

Mad tyrant, with oppressive hand, shall dare T'infringe their rights, will resolutely brave His dark designs, or struggling, nobly die. The firm supporters of our injur'd rights Shall lose their splendors in the brighter beams Of patriots sam'd, and heroes yet unborn.

I fee a Homer and a Milton rife
In all the pomp and majefty of fong,
Which gives immortal vigour to the deeds
Atchiev'd by heroes in the field of fame.
A fecond Pope, like that Arabian bird
Of which no age can boast but one, may yet
Awake the muse by Schuylkill's silent stream,
And bid new forests bloom along her banks.
And Susquehanna's rocky stream unsung,
In bright meander winding round the hills,
Where first the mountain nymph sweet Echo heard
The uncouth music of my rural lay,
Shall yet re-musmur to the magic sound
Of song heroic, when in suture days

Some noble Frampden rifes into fame. Now in the bow'rs of Tultororah's hills, As once on Pindus, all the Muses stray; New Theban bards high foaring reach the fkies. And swim along thro' azure streams of air. Or Roanoke's and James's limpid waves, How sweet their music murmus in the gale! Another Denham celebrates their flow In gliding numbers and harmonious lays. And when a train of rolling years are past, (So fang the exil'd Seer in Patmos iffe.) A new Jerusalem sent down from Heav'n Shall grace our happy carth: perhaps this land, Whose virgin bosom shall then receive, tho' late, Myriads of faints, with their Almighty King, To live and reign a thousand years. Thence call d Millennium. Paradife anew Shall flourish; no dang rous tree or deathful Fruit shall grow; no tempting serpent to Allure the foul from native innocence: No thiftle here, or briar, or thorn shall spring Earth's curse before: the lion and the lamb, In mutual friendship link'd, shall browne the shrub; And tim'rous deer with rabid tygers fray O'er mead, or lofty hill, or graffy plain. The happy people, free from fecond death. Shall find secure repose. Such days the world, And such America, thou first may have,

When

When ages yet to come have run their found, And future years of bliss alone remain.

This is thy praife, America, thy pow'r. Hail happy land! by science visited,
The seat of empire and of freedom too;
The seat of empire and of freedom too;
The seat of empire and of freedom too;
The seat of empire and of seat one of the seat of th

ON THE PROSPECT OF ARTS AND SCIENCES IN AMERICA.

WRITTEN NEAR FIFTY YEARS AGO BY THE CE-LEBRATED DR. GEORGE BERKELEY, DEAN OF DERRY, AND AFTERWARDS LORD BISHOP OF CLOYNE, WHILE HE WAS IN AMERICA.

THE muse, disgusted at an age and clime
Barren of every glorious theme,
In distant lands now waits a better time,
Producing subjects worthy fame.

In happy climes, where from the genial fun
And virgin earth fuch fcenes enfue,
The force of art by nature feems out-done,
And fancied beauties by the true:

In happy climes, the feat of innocence,
Where nature guides, and virtue rules:
Where men shall not impose, for truth and sense,
The pedantry of courts and schools:

There shall be seen another golden age,

The rise of empire and of arts,

The good and great inspiring epic rage,

The wisest heads and noblest hearts;

Not fuch as Europe breeds in her decay:
Such as she bred when fresh and young,
When heav'nly slame did animate her clay,
By suture ages shall be sung.

Westward the course of empire takes its way:
The four first acts already past,
A fifth shall close the drama with the day:
Time's noblest offspring is the last.

I M P R O M P T U.

LOGIC AN-D MORALS.

ADDRESSED TO LORD SHELBURNE.

"In the late Reform," faid his Lordship in the House of Peers,
"more has been done than was promised; for great part
"might have been cluded."

By promises Shelburne can ne'er come to shame;
To elude and perform, he proves are the same;
Be this his state-maxim, he'll shine in this art,
His head yields such logic, such morals his heart:
Rail no more then ye factions, but candidly own, North, or Wentworth, ne'er gave such support to the throne!

ANOTHER.

ON SEEING GENERAL ARNOLD AGAIN AT COURT, THE DAY THAT LORD SHELBURNE KISSED HANDS ON HIS LATE APPOINTMENT.

IN Wentworth's splendour, Arnold kept his den; In Shelburne's twilight, lo! he crawls again!

O D E,

ADDRESSED TO GENERAL ARNOLD.

WELCOME one Arnold to our thore! Thy deeds on Fame's firong pinions bore,

Spread

Worn out with toils and great defigns, Germain to you the feals resigns. Your worth superior owns; Would rev'rend Twitcher now retreat. We still might keep a greater fleet, By bribing o'er Paul Jones.

D'er Twitcher's breast, and Germain's too, Fix Edward's star and ribbon blue, To ravish all beholders: That when to Heaven they get a call. Their stars (like Eli's cloak) may fall On Paul's and Arnold's shoulders.

Carmarthen, ope your facred gates, The gen'rous, valiant Germain waits, Who held the Atlantic steerage: (He'll shine a jewel in the crown) When Arnold knocks all traitors down, He, too, shall have a Peerage!

Should faithless Wedderburne decline To rank his name, Germain, with thine, This truth (unfeed) I'll tell you, Rife a Scotch Peer-right weel I ween, You'll foon be chose-one of fixteen. Dare Grafton then expel you?

AMERICA, AN ODE.

TO THE PROPLE OF ENGLAND.

Written in 1776.

ÆSCHYLUS.

I. ı.

FAR o'er the western azure main,

The adverse coast about to gain,
Appear'd the fatal barks that bore

Our hostile legions to a kindred shore.

Sunk was the sun, and dark the seas;
The wild waves murmur'd round the prow;

And dismal sounds were wasted in the breeze,

Consus'd alarms, and shrieks of distant woe.

Fix'd, as rooted in the tide.

Each keel at once forgot to glide:

Pale horror damp'd the watchful pilot's brow;

Hush'd were the winds above, and still'd the sloods

below.

II. 2,

- * From * Cusco's mournful vale the cries
- " Of guiltless blood ascend the skies;
- " To mutual flaughter rush the frantic band :
 - " The fathers crimes their offspring bear,
 - " The tardy vengeance still they fear,
- "While bigot flavery wastes the destin'd land.

II. 3.

- " Spirits of heroes old
- " Who erst your country's rights assail'd
- " Challeng'd in arms; and now heaven's guardian
 - " O'er struggling freedom hold;
 - " Rescuing her unpolluted shrine
 - " In other climes her fons ye join.
- The massacre of the innocent Peruvians, at the samous interview of their emperor with Pizarro and his Spaniards, in the valley near Cusco, was quickly followed and revenged by the cruelties attending the civil wars in that country among the conquerors. Pizarro, after facrificing Almagro to his ambition, who had been his friend, and his original partner in the conquest of Peru, was himself assassinated, at noon, in his palace, by the nephew and partisans of his rival. That fordid and cruel avarice which first carried the sword thither, turned it against every one by whose death the rushans could hope for plunder; and history affords scarce any thing more inhuman and persidious than what the Spaniards suffered from each other, except the miseries they had before inflicted on the mild and helptes Indians.

(A) (A) A)

" Heaven

[267]

- " Heaven her blazing portal spreads;
- " Shafts of glory pierce the night;
- " Lo! the bright van the * royal patriot leads,
- " Founder of laws, and arbiter of right;
 - " Penfive his brow, as when opprest
 - " By Danish pride his realm he view'd:
 - "Girt with his peers + Fitzwalter lifts his crest,
 - "With 1 him, who ill-ftar'd Henry's arms with"ftood:
 - " See Spencer's foe, sierce Lancaster || appear,
- " And § Kent too early flain, and Treffel's ¶ brow fevere.
- Alfred was the first who compiled a body of laws for the whole kingdom.

 Blackstone's Introduction.
- † The leader of the barons who compelled King John to fign Magna Charta.
- $ Simon de Montford, Earl of Leicester, headed the oppoments of Henry III.
- ¶ The Earl of Lancaster was principal of the league against the Spencers, favourites of Edward II. who ruined that unfortunate prince, by alienating the affections of his people.
- § Edmund, Earl of Kent, was a young man of an amiable character and of the blood royal. He joined in the opposition to the Spencers, but was afterward put to death by the intrigues of the queen mother of Edward III. for endeavouring to remove her and Mortimer from the flation they had usurped and filled so ill.
- William Treffel, Chief Justice of England, was named procurator of the people, to refign back to Edward II. their fealty at his deposition, and to renounce their allegiance to him.

III: 1

- " Frowning from Chalgrave's fanguine field,
- "In timely death his virtue seal'd,
- " The right he bled for, to maintain;
- " Hampden in sun-bright mail augments the train.
 - " Victims of Stuart's bigot pride;
 - " Nor are ye absent, generous pair,
- " + In many a year of adverse fortune tried,
- " Leicester's firm son, and Bedford's gentle heir.
- * He was killed in a skirmish in the beginning of the civit' wars, while the parliament's cause was yet that of liberty and the people. There seems a great similarity in the cases of Hampden resusing the payment of ship-money, and the American denial of parliamentary taxation. The British parliament seems to stand nearly in the same relation to America, as the King to the people of England; each possesses a constitutional supremery, which invests them with the most important powers; but each is bound to abstain from invading a right which our constitution, expressly reserves to the people; the only sure defence against the despotism of a King at home, or a nation at a distance.
- † Whoever has feen the letters of Algernon Sidney, will easily estimate the worth of that truly great character. A modern reader will be much struck with the following passage from one of his father, the Earl of Leicester. It was not God's will that the King should follow the advice I gave him, to accommodate his differences with the Scots, and not to make war, where nothing was to be gained, and much might be loss."

" Join'd

- " Join'd in love, in fate ye fell!
- " Still the just muse your fame shall tell,
- "Where freedom holds on earth her hallow'd feat;
- " And nations yet unborn the pious strains repeat.

M. z.

- " Ye too, they cry, be bold!
- " Uncheck'd by secret guile, or sorce abhorr'd,
 - "Your charter'd rights uphold;
- " And dauntless brave the mercenary sword.
 - "To heaven oppression rears her head,
 - " Her scourge the prostrate kingdoms dread;
- " But short her rule, and sleeting is her hour.
 - " The rod avenging justice bears,
 - " And when are past the appointed years,
- 44 Smites with a giant's force, and quells her power.

III. 3.

- " Fast by the sapphire throne
- " Its adamant beam the balance sways,
- "In which the deeds of men th' Eternal weighs:
 - " Thence the decrees are known
 - "That fet the fuffering nations free,
 - 44 And bear to virtue victory.

- " Cherish deeds by heaven approv'd,
- * And virtues equal to thy doom.
- " Thrice happy land! See on thy plains belov'd
- " * The facred muse her promis'd seat assume.
 - " As o'er the main thy towers arise,
 - " Spreading their falutary light;
 - " And bless with hope the weary'd seaman's eyes,
 - " Worn with th' Atlantic fform, and wrapt in night,
- " Thy genial breast shall still the unhappy greet,
- " Refuge of injur'd worth, and freedom's last retreat."

PROPOSAL FOR A NEW DICTIONARY.

THERE are in every language, ancient and modern, certain heterogeneous words and anomalous expressions, which render it more difficult to be acquired by students and foreigners, than even the most licentious idiomatic phrases, or the most irregular combination of sentences. In vain may the laborious Lexicographer boast of having traced every radical word through a collateral series of parallel ramissions. The Philologist still toils with hopeless

* However convultions like those in America may retard the progress of the arts during their continuance, they make abundant recompence, by forcing the minds of men to uncommon exertions. The strength thus acquired cannot fail of producing the noblest fruits, when the return of peace and establishment of freedom permits them to be occupied with those objects.

investigation.

investigation, and finds himself bewildered in the maze of petty familiarity, and entangled in colloquial barbarisms. The ebullitions of convivial or epistolary humour, and the sallies of dramatic hilarity, the lucubrations of the periodical essayist, the sportive vein and dry intelligence of our diurnal, nocturnal, and hebdomadal historians, are almost totally unintelligible, for want of an adequate interpretation. To remedy this defect in English literature, I have, with infinite labour, compiled a vocabulary or glossary, intended as a supplement to a larger and more folemn dictionary. It is easy to foresee, that the idle and illiterate will complain that I have encreased their labours, by endeavouring to diminish them; and that I have explained what is more easy, by what is more difficult-Ignotum per ignotius. I expect, on the other hand, the liberal acknowledgments of the learned. He who is buried in scholastic retirement, secluded from the asfemblies of the gay, and remote from the circles of the polite, will at once comprehend the definitions, and be grateful for such a seasonable and necessary elacidation of his mother-tongue. Annexed to this letter is a fhort specimen of the work, thrown together in a vague and defultory manner, not even adhering to alphabetical concatenation. The whole will be comprised in two folio volumes, and will appear some time within the ensuing twenty years.

N 2 - 1

In the mean-while, fubscriptions are taken in at all the most eminent booksellers in London and Westminster; of whom may be learnt all further particulars relative to this arduous and important undertaking.

SPECIMEN.

Higgledy-piggledy-Conglomeration and confusion.

Hurly-burly-Extreme tumult and uproar.

Scribble-scrabble-Pages of inanity.

See-saw-Alternate preponderation.

Tittle-tattle-Futile conversation.

Mum chance-Mental torpidity.

Fee! Fau! Fum!-Gigantic intonations.

Arfy-varfy An invertion of capitals and fundamentals.

Hobble de-boy -- Adolescence, between the period of puberty and virility.

Tit for Tan-Adequate retaliation.

Sbilly-shally-Hesitation and irresolution.

Willy-nilly-The execution of an act mangre the confent of another.

Dingle-dangle-Aerial suspension.

Hurry-scurry-Inordinate precipitation.

Ridd'emerce - An ænigmatic exordium.

Ding-dong—Tintinnabulory chimes, used metaphorically to signify dispatch and vehemence.

Tag-rag The lowest Plebeians. See base-born, and Riff-raff Scum of the earth.

Nincompoop,

Nincompoop . Afinine wretches.

Hocus pocus - Pseudo-necromancy.

Jemminy-cremminy! -- An emasculate obtestation.

Rigmarole-Discourse, incoherent and rhapsodical.

Zig-zag-Transverse angles.

Crinkum-crankum-Lines of irregularity and involution.

Helter skelter-quasi bilariter & celeriter, signifying motion of equal jocurdity and velocity.

Hodge-podge—A culinary mixture of heterogeneous ingredients, applied metaphorically to all discordant combinations.

Philological disquisitions are but ill adapted to the readers of a fugacious paper. Having, therefore, already given a sufficient indication of my purpose to the philosopher, the academic, and the scholar. I shall at present add no further interpretations; but in order to convince the learned of the necessity and importance of the work announced to them, I shall fomewhat enlarge the catalogue of terms that demand explication; which, like base metal among legitimate coin, have, by long usage, become current in our language; and without which the commerce of the world, or even the traffic of letters, can with difficulty be maintained either with profit or delectation. To explain them may be fome glory: it N 3 would would be more substantial same to contribute to their extirpation.

[274]

CATALOGUE.

Wishy-washy, Hoddy-doddy, Mess-medley, Niddy-noddy, Fiddle-faddle. Huff bluff. Slap-dash, Tory-rory, Slap-bang, Whisky-frisky, Hum drum. Snickerinee, Tuzzy-muzzy, Harum-scarum, Gimminy-gomminy, Rantum scantum, Wig-wam, Pit-pat, Chit-chat, Flim-flam, Prittle-prattle, Namby-pamby, Hob or Nob, Hoity-toity, Bamboozle, Tip top, Hubble-bubble, Hurdy-gurdy, Humptdy-dumptdy, Hum-krum. Hugger-mugger, Diddle-daddle, Hiccius-doccius, Humbug, Snip-fnap, Shiddlecum-sh-e. Knick-knack, Full-but. Fal-lal. Pell-mell. Rolly-poly, &c. &c. Whipper Inapper,

It is easy, from this specimen, to suppose extenfion and amplification. Printed authorities will be subjoined.

[275]

fubjoined as vouchers, for the existence of every term and word that shall be cited, and its various significations, where there are more than one, properly explained. He who writes the dictionary of any tongue, may be considered as labouring in a coal mine; but he who collects the refuse of a language, claims more than ordinary commiseration, and may be said to sift the cinders.

LEXIPHANES.

A PERSIAN SONG,

TRANSLATED BY SIR WILLIAM JONES.

SWEET maid, if thou wouldst charm my sight, And bid these arms thy neck infold; That rosy cheek, that lily hand Would give thy poet more delight Than all Bocara's vaunted gold, Than all the gems of Samarcand.

Boy, let yon * liquid ruby flow, And bid thy pensive heart be glad. Whate'er the frowning zealots say, Tell them their Eden cannot show A stream so clear as Roenabad, A bow'r so sweet as Mosellay.

* A meleed ruby is a common periphrasis for wine in the Persian poetry. See Hafer, Ode 22.

N 4

Oh!

Oh! when these fair, persidious maids, Whose eyes our secret haunts insest, Their dear destructive charms display, Each glance my tender breast invades, And robs my wounded soul of rest, As Tartars seize their destin'd prey.

In vain with love our bosoms glow; Can all our tears, can all our sighs, New lustre to those charms impart? Can cheeks where living roses blow, Where nature spreads her richest dyes, Require the borrow'd gloss of art?

Speak not of fate—ah! change the theme, And talk of odours, talk of wine, Talk of the flow'rs that round us bloom. 'Tis all a cloud, 'tis all a dream; To love and joy thy thoughts confine, Nor hope to pierce the facred gloom.

Beauty has such resistless pow'r,
That ev'n the chaste Egyptian dame *
Sigh'd for the blooming Hebrew boy:
For her how fatal was the hour,
When to the banks of Nilus came,
† A youth so lovely and so coy!

* Zeleikha, Potiphar's wife.

+ Joseph:

[277]

But, ah! sweet maid, my counsel hear; (Youth should attend when those advise Whom long experience renders sage) While music charms the ravish'd ear, While sparkling cups delight our eyes, Be gay, and scorn the frowns of age.

What cruel answer have I heard!
And yet, by Heav'n, I love thee still:
Can aught be cruel from thy lip?
Yet say, how fell that bitter word,
From lips which streams of sweetness sill,
Which nought but drops of honey sip?

Go boldly forth, my fimple lay,
Whose accents flow with artless ease,
Like orient pearls at random strung;
Thy notes are sweet, the damsels say,
But oh! far sweeter, if they please,
The nymphs for whom these notes are sung.

FROM THE EUROPEAN MAGAZINE.

The following performance, though bearing the name of a most respectable writer, has been some time handed about in manuscript as the production of an excellent Hibernian dramatic author *. been frequently copied and given to particular friends, by one of whom an imperfect transcript was committed to the press in Ireland. As it has been much fought after, you will oblige many of your readers by inserting this jeu d'esprit more correct than it has hitherto appeared. The author of it, who is known to entertain fentiments of the highest respect for the person whose name he waggishly assumes, will pardon the liberty taken with his work, when he reflects on the number of perfons to whom the reading of it will afford entertainment. I am, &c.

J. P. D.

A TOUR TO CELBRIDGE, BY DR. SAMUEL JOHNSON.

THE love of variety is a passion naturally implanted in the human breast, nor perhaps is the rational segregated from the brute creature, by any more discernible discrimination than an eager desire to visit different countries, to explore new objects,

Mr. Jephson.

and to accumulate fresh materials for the versatility of contemplative investigation. Sir Thomas Brown fays, that were the regions of his fecond state of existence left to his election, he would choose to be the inhabitant of a planet, rather than of a fixed star. Without flaying to examine, whether there is not more of humour than folidity in this whimfical preference, we may venture to pronounce that the faculties of the mind stagnate by confinement, and that change of place will naturally produce vicistitude of There is, besides, this certain advantage in travelling; it makes us independent of other mens labour; observation rescues from prejudice, teaches to moderate credulity, and affifts to detect imposi-I was naturally led to these reflections by a retrospect to the occurrences of a day lately spent in the vicinage of Dublin. Having visited every thing worthy the notice of a stranger in the metropolis of Ireland, and being fatigued by conviviality without conversation, society without selection, constitutional bumpers, and stale anecdotes, I determined to explore the banks of the Liffey, and to fearch among the amnicolists for that entertainment which eluded my pursuit in the urbanity of the capital; letters, which the officiousness of friends, rather than any folicitation on my part, had put into my hands at my leaving London, served to introduce me among others to two ladies who happened to be at that time resident in Dublin. The name of Mrs. Greville is too well known in the world of taste and fashion to depend for celebrity on the perishable memorial of a fugitive itinerary; and Mrs. Jephfon possesses all the powers of captivation, without brandishing any of the weapons of allurement. I had fcarcely intimated to these ladies my satiety of the town, and my wish for a rural excursion, when Mrs. Greville offered me a place in her coach, which had been just ordered to the door to convey Mrs. Jephson, a dignified clergyman, then present, and herself, to the seat of Colonel Marlay at Celbridge. The clergyman I afterwards found to be the brother of Colonel Marlay. whose villa was to be the Calpe of our peregrination; as I liked the company I did not hefitate to accept the accommodation. Though we passed with a rapid velocity over little more than three leagues of high road to Celbridge, I observed many stately mansions, many well disposed enclosures, and more towering plantations than any eye but that of a native of Scotland could discover in the black circumference of the whole Caledonian horizon. The pleafure I received from the transient contemplation of such scenes, was often interrupted by the fight of tattered mendicants; who crawled from their hamlets of mud on the way fide, to howl for charity, or to gaze in torpid suspension at the ordinary phenomenon of a passing equipage. National resections are always illiberal, and often ill founded; the poverty of the lower class of people in Ireland is generally imputed to laziness, but sagacity will not rest satisfied with fuch a folution, especially when it is considered that the rifque of a halter is intuitively preferable to the certainty of famine, and that the rags of these miserable bipeds might be mended with less trouble than they are worn; and in a shorter time than, if they are shaken off, they can again be indued. This remark must however occur to every sojourner in Ireland, that the transitions in the scale of opulence are by means gradual as in England, from abundance to competency, from luxury to convenience, from the elegancies to the necessaries of life; but from superfluities to indigence, from the riot of profusion to the foulest dregs of squalidity and wretchedness; sothat there seems to be few intermediate links in the great descending chain of property. When the strepituofity of total progression rendered the modulation of ordinary discourse inaudible, the ladies and the dean had recourse to song, that we might not rely folely for our entertainment on the gratification of vision; the dean began by chaunting some verses of a sublime anthem, in a strain of harmony, which · might have excited extraordinary emotions in a Webfter fter or a Manzuoli; the ladies, who joined in the chorus, assured me, he was a perfect master of the scientific part of music, and my auditory organs did justice to his powers of vocal execution: by degrees the ferious tenor of facred melody was exchanged for the lighter airs of the Beggar's Opera; and before we reached the Cherry-tree (a magnifi.ent publichouse at the village of Lucan, within a league of Celbridge) our small company had vocalized all the fongs in the opera in such a manner as I never heard them executed upon any theatre in London. overturn, occasioned by our coachman's driving over fome pigs and children who were lying together in the middle of the road, obliged us to descend from our vehicle at the Cherry-tree. While the carriage was refitting, and the ladies re-adjusting their dress, which had suffered some discomposure from the accident, I entered into conversation with the publican. I was naturally led to make some enquiries about the place I was going to visit, and the character of the owner. The substance of my host's information was, that Celbridge was reckoned one of the most beautiful villas on the river; but esquire Connolly's was the grandest seat in the whole world: the colonel, he told me, had long served in the army with great reputation, and had quitted it on some disgust, or to have more leisure for the bufiness of agriculture in which which he takes great delight, and is very skilful. His cloathing was of goats-skins fastened together with leather thongs, and girt round the middle by a fash, which he had worn in all the late wars. retirement he had never shaved his board, which hung below his waist, and was quite white, though his age was but little on the dusky side of fifty. His love of fequestration being generally known, his gate was feldom befieged with idle vifitors, and many were deterred from approaching it by the fear of a twelve pounder planted at the orifice of a fide wall, commanding the entrance to the mansion; this piece of ordnance being loaded up to the muzzle with boiled potatoes, spontaneously discharged its vegetable ammunition in the faces of all who laid hold of his knocker without business or invitation.

N 6.

This account was so choaked with colloquial barbarism and idiomatic anomaly, that I had some trouble to select a little grain of the narrator's meaning from the rank exuberance of his unweeded diction. In a short time afterwards we set forwards and arrived at the place of our destination. My curiosity was first excited by the aperture in the wall, which might have been intended for the purpose mentioned by my communicative landsord; but as the party came by invitation, I had little sear of suffering by any sudden explosion.

Colonel

[284]

Colonel Marlay met us soon after our entrance, and received us with that polite and disengaged affability more proper to the character of a soldier and a gentleman than to the savage rusticity of discontent and solitude.

Though it is too commonly the practice of compilers of journals to swell their meagre pages with unimportant events and trivial circumstances, to prefent little to the reader but what was too obvious to escape notice, or too infignificant to deserve it: yet I shall not think the little dignity of these sheets impaired by a particular description of this gentleman's dress and figure. By comparing the authenticity of ocular knowledge with the fallaciousness of legendary rumour, conviction will at last find her sober medium between the dangerous autherity of heterodox rejection, and the despicable acquiescence of passive credulity. The beard excepted, which hung thick, long, and albescent below his breast, there was no circumstance of fingularity in the colonel's appearance. He wore his hair in the military fashion tied behind with a ribbon; a bright garnet-coloured cloth, ornamented with a well-fancied brass button, was his superior tegument; over a tunick of filk proper for the folfitial Season, and elegantly wrought in the tambour with va--riegated embroidery of flowers and foliage: from below the genual articulation to the sucated division of the the body, he was covered with flesh-coloured Indian linen, of a tenuity almost transparent, through which the contour of femoral rotundity filled the eye with a satisfactory plumpness. Minutiæ like these might probably have escaped my notice, had they not seemed greatly to attract the attention of the ladies. It is natural to look at what we see others examine. Besides I was summoned to more than a superficial furvey by the accounts I had just received from him of the Cherry-tree. --- Were I able to recollect or describe the particular scite and combinations of objects which constitute the beauties of Celbridge, I should not scruple upon the whole to pronounce it beautiful. Impressions from things which environ us generally precede examination of their cause; the philosopher may, if he pleases, contend that the heat is not in the fire; but in the body which it confumes Yet when any grateful revolution is wrought almost instantaneously in our internal sensations, we must conclude, that such effect has been produced less by our disposition to receive pleasure at the time, than by the aptitude of the objects around us to execite it. Scarcely had I taken a furvey of the place from a spot of some eminence, when I found a complacent ferenity, a mellow composure of thought like genial funshine diffused all over my frame. The lively fallies of my companions of the way, poigpoignant without malice, and frolicksome without fatuity, had occasioned some paroxysms of hilarity, that bordered upon turbulence, but these spassins of the mind were immediately tranquillised by the placidness of the scene before me. I selt pleasure without irritation, and in the sedateness of contentment lost all appetite for the delirium of extasy. I could not indeed sorbear laying hold of the sair hand of one of the ladies, and crying out with the enamoured Gallus, Hic gelidi fontes, hic mollia prata, Lycoris: Hic nemus: hic ipso teeum consumerer avo.

My Lycoris, seeming to conceive the full force of this passionate distich with an amiable subrission of countenance, led me forward to a spot at no great distance, called the island. We passed into it over a bridge of one small arch; it is nearly triangular in form, contains about five acres of Irish mensuration, and is thus completely insulated. On one side slows the main course of the river Lissey, and on the other a stream branches from the river, and being forced above its level by mounds, contains a sufficient weight of the sluid thus compressed, to circumvolute a mill-wheel for the comminution of corn; near one angle of the base, and at no great distance from the mill, the shining surface of the water in its course forms 2 cascade by breaking over its rampart; down the side of this it falls in one pellucid sheet, and disdaining the opposition of the rocks beneath it, hurries on with foaming precipitation to rejoin the parent river, from whence it seems to have been reluctantly separated. The island is little indebted for variety to any inequality in its furface; yet the water with which it is environed, the intermixture of forest trees and odorous shrubs with which it is planted, and the healthful werdure of the turf, where it is unsheltered, conspire to bestow upon it a very captivating amenity. Some part of the estate of Celbridge, with the mansion, and this island, belonged once (as I am informed) to Mrs. Vanhomrigh; a name which perhaps might have been preserved only in some musty title deed, had not Swift conferred immortality on the female who bore it, by substituting for the dissonant Batavian, the fofter poetical denomination of Vanessa. Close to the stream I was shewed this lady's bower; it is umbrageous and refrigeratory, obliged to a small degree of art for having conducted some luxuriant branches of the marginal trees for a canopy, for raising a bank of earth by way of seat, covered with fuch flowers as delight in the shade, and for having placed there a few wooden benches about the fize of the the human body; these have fallen to the ground less. in appearance through the lapse of time, than from the reiterated impulse of external concustation. The laurel tree is the only standard evergreen here, and flourishes near the bower in great abundance .-Whether it was mentioned to me feriously by dean Marlay, or was only the extemporaneous effusion of female pleasantry, I cannot now precisely determine, but I think I heard that Vanessa, when mistress of Celbridge, had put down a laurel for a very brilliant couplet, of which Dr. Swift for her own vanity told her she was the subject and he the author. subsequent possessors of Celbridge with counteractive industry deracinated a laurel for every distich published by his posthumous editors, disgraceful to the memory of that fingular genius, the island of Celbridge would be destitute of a laurel.—We left the bower, the laurels, and the island, and proceeded to an irregular bridge of I know not how many arches. From the central part of this bridge some miles of the river, and the gentle declivities of the ground appear to great advantage. Colonel Marlay possesses a confiderable tract on each fide of the river, a circumfance of distinguished advantage, as the view from either bank cannot be prejudiced by the malicious hostilities of an opposite neighbour, nor by a cause less reprehensible, though more to be apprehended, the the vicious appetite for altering the landscapes of nature without genius to embellish them. As both shores call him master, he can sleep secure without the fear that his verdant banks will be tortured into terrace, the winding stream quadrated into sish-ponds; that hares and grey-hounds of lead may take their eternal station in the fields before him; or that a white-washed Neptune will be for ever recumbent in his sight upon an urn like a bagpipe, from which can issue neither moisture nor melody.

While I was admiring the fantastical ramifications of some umbelliserous plants that hung over the margin of the Liffey, the fallacious bank, imperceptibly corroded by the moist tooth of the fluid, gave way beneath my feet, and I was fuddenly fubmerged to some fathoms of profundity; presence of mind in constitutions not naturally timid is generally in proportion to the eminence of the peril; having never learned to move through the water in horizontal progression, had I desponded, I had perished: but being for a moment raised above the element by my struggles, or by some felicitous casualty, I was sensible of the danger, and instantly embraced the means of extrication; a cow at the moment of my lapse had entered the stream within the distance of a protruded arm, and being in the act of transverse navigation navigation to feek the pasture of the opposite bank, I laid hold on that part of the animal which is loofely pendant behind, and is formed by a continuation of the vertebræ; in this manner I was fafely conveyed to a fordable passage, not without some delectation from the fense of progress without effort on my part, and the exhilarating approximation of more than problematical deliverance. Though in some respect I refembled the pilot of Gyas jam senior madidaque fluens in weste; yet my companions, unlike the barbarous Phrygian spectators, forbore to acerbitate the uncouthness of embarrassment by the infults of derifion; shrieks of complorance testified forrow for my submersion, and fasety was made more pleasant by the felicitations of fympathy; as the danger was over, I took no umbrage at a little rifibility excited by the feculency of my vifage, upon which the cow had discharged her graminous digestion in a very ludicrous abundance: about this time the bell fummoned us to dinner, and as the cutaneous contact of irrigated garments is neither pleafant nor falubrious, I was eafily perfuaded by the ladies, to divest myself of mine; colonel Marlay obligingly accommodated me with a loofe covering of camblet; I found it commodious and more agreeable than the many compressive ligatures of modern drapery. That there might be no violation of decorum.

[291]

corum, I took care to have the loose robe fastened clese before with small cylindrical wires, which the dainty singers of the ladies easily removed from their own dress, and inserted into mine at such proper intervals as to leave no aperture that could awaken the susceptibility of temperament, or provoke the cachinnations of levity.

N. B. The doctor returned from Celbridge by the river fide, and may make observations upon the villas he passed by, and their owners.

END OF THE FOURTH VOLUME.

